This Is About Ike

This is about Ike . . . Dwight David Eisenhower, 34th president of the United States.

From the beginning, when his name first was mentioned as a presidential possibility, the nation knew this much about him—

He was a man who had the gift for moderation, for conciliation and avoidance of extremes.

When he was elected, he declared he would try his honest best to be the president of all the people, regardless of party.

Without question, he has tried to do this.

He has succeeded to the point that this virtue at times seemed almost a vice.

He could not fail to see, in the campaign swings of 1952 and 1956, that the people liked him. He responded. It is human nature to like being liked. The response of the people, their at times almost overwhelming expressions of affection for him, created in him an inevitable reaction. He liked them. Perhaps this led him, at times, to be naive and try to please everyone. If so, there are worse errors.

It is possible here to speak out of a personal knowledge. The President resolved that whatever might be said of him when he completed his term of office, none could say of him that he had been "just a politician."

Differences

It may be that his weakness lies in the fact he believes most human differences can be removed, or at least ameliorated to the point of agreement, by an honest approach and a generous recognition of the prejudices and difficulties involved. Winston Churchill has said that it was this great gift which made it possible for Eisenhower to take all the jealous, suspicious elements of the Allied forces, including the governments in exile, and weld them into a unified force which won a great victory.

There is no doubt but that he has this gift.

Be that as it may, the fact remains Dwight D. Eisenhower has held to his principle—he has tried to be the president of all the people. None can charge him with fear, timidity, and an unwillingness to "rough it up" when roughing it up was needed.

This quality of his patience was never more in evidence than in the Little Rock school case. The governor of Arkansas was using state troops to thwart the decree of a district court. But, though the NAACP and the critics charged him with timidity and "naivete," the President waited. The governor of Arkansas asked for a conference. It was granted. When it was done, the governor emerged to say he accepted the Supreme Court decision as the law of the land, and that he and his people were law-abiding. The President shook his hand, and as they parted, wished him luck.

The Record

What followed is in the public record. After four days the governor, who had pledged himself to what he, the governor, voluntarily had called "the law of the land," had his attorneys walk out of the court with a defiant statement, withdrew his troops and thereby allowed a mob to take control next morning. The patient President, still delaying, sent a request asking for observance of the law. On the second morning the mob was still there. Troops were then sent in. He had no choice but to act. His oath and the Constitution required it. He had not changed. He is still the same man of good will.

That many politicians who have so long deceived and inflamed their people should then denounce him as a tyrant and revile him in the most inflammatory terms seems but a further unhappy commentary on that leadership.

If Ike had used troops to stop a strike, in violation of the law, he would be cheered, not damned. One keeps remembering that picture on the front porch at Newport. The President was shaking hands . . . he even had an arm around the governor who had said he would obey the law.

Who has served his country best? In this critical time Dwight D. Eisenhower is the one man who can provide leadership. He alone can support the Southern people who, while opposing segregation, nonetheless believe in law. He alone can prevent the issue from falling into the hands of extremist mobs. We can be thankful we have a man of good will and moderation in the White House, and not one who is acting for votes.

GIs Escort Negroes in Little Rock

Quiet Returns To Torn School

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 4—

Restless, emotional segregationists stayed away from Central High Friday and the school went through another tense day of integrated classes under heavy Army guard.

There were no incidents. The outburst of Thursday morning—a walkout of 75 students and the burning of a Negro effigy in a spectacular demonstration—has been followed by a quiet day.

Little Rock's people expected quiet over the weekend while school is out but more trouble next week.

STUDENTS JEER

The nine Negro students, again traveling to and from school in an Army station wagon escorted by two jeeps loaded with soldiers, were jeered by students outside the school.

The Army, which Thursday promised the NAACP the Negroes would be protected, took no chances Friday and had a group of 16 soldiers surround the Negro students to escort them between the station wagon and the main front entrance.

Some 30 paratroopers of the 101st Airborne Division were stationed inside the school. About 70 members of the federalized Arkansas National Guard were patrolling the school grounds.

265 ABSENT

Little Rock school Supt. Virgil Blossom reported that Friday's absences totaled 265, including "about 50 students" who have been suspended for participating in the walkout. Total enrollment is 1,900.

Meanwhile, the issue of using

Expert Here Says Satellite Confirms Red Missile Boast

By ALLEN HEAD

The successful Russian earth satellite confirms Soviet claims to an operational intercontinental missile, a leading Atlanta scientist said Friday night.

Dr. Carsie C. Adams, president of the National Research Development Corp., said whatever was used to settle the satellite in its orbit had "a high degree of advanced instrumentation and efficiency."

A top ranking official of Project Vanguard, the U.S. earth satellite program, was quoted by the Orlando (Fla.) Sentinel Friday as saying:

"Frankly, it's enough to scare the hell out of me. If they can do that they can drop ICBMs on us." He would not permit use of his name.

"The missile would have to be exactly controlled to set up a successful orbit," Dr. Adams pointed out. "If the satellite was launched from an ICBM, there should be no doubt left as to the missile's operational effectiveness."

According to a Third Army spokesman, the Ft. Stewart station, set up for Project Vanguard, is the only Georgia outfit capable of plotting a course on the satellite.

W. H. Close of 225 Forkner Rd., Decatur, director of the Atlanta area "moonwatch" station, said his volunteer group had not been notified to watch for the satellite.

At any rate, he added, his group is still building telescopes.

Teamsters Elect Hoffa by 3 to 1

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Oct. 4 (AP)—Stubby, square-jawed Jimmy Hoffa today took over full control as president of the giant Teamsters Union and pledged to turn the organization into a "model of trade unionism."

The 44-year-old target of labor scandal charges was elected chief officer of the 1½-million-member union by a tremendous margin of nearly 3-1 over the combined vote of two opponents.

CHICAGOANS LOSE

In the final count, 1,208 widely cheering delegates voted for Hoffa, 313 for William A. Lee and 140 for Thomas J. Haggerty.

Lee and Haggerty, both from Chicago, had campaigned for a cleanup of the corruption conditions charged to the union.

The delegates thus chose to ignore the charges against Hoffa, retiring union President Dave Beck and other Teamsters bosses. They had been accused of helping themselves to vast sums from the union's rich treasury and abusing union powers.

SMEAR CHARGE

The charges against Hoffa included associating with known hoodlums and racketeers.

Hoffa, denying the charges as a smear, said he and the Teamsters Union "have just come through the most vicious attack any group of workers has ever experienced. Never in history has so much outside effort been exerted on the internal affairs of a free organization."

But troubles for Hoffa and his huge union are far from over. It faces an almost certain ouster from the AFL-CIO, a renewed probe by the Senate Rackets Investigating Committee headed by Sen. McClellan (D-Ark) and even a court attempt to throw him out of his newly won union office.

"ARROGANT DEFIANCE"

Sen. McClellan said in Washington Hoffa's election was "an arrogant defiance of the AFL-CIO," the federation having judged Hoffa

3 Stores Here Are Held Up In 4 Hours

Three liquor stores were robbed within a space of four hours Friday, police said. The bandits were believed to be a Negro and two white men operating independently.

No one was injured in the latest forays. However, in other recent holdups police said the white pair had severely beaten two Negro clerks and the Negro fired a pistol over the heads of employees in a Whitehall street, SW, loan office.

The Negro struck twice for a total haul of approximately $319, reports showed. The white men took an estimated $337 in a swift strike during the afternoon rush traffic hour at 501 Spring St., NW.

The first holdup was reported at 12:35 p.m. in a liquor store at 245 Fort St., NE. An employee, Grady York, said a Negro looted the cash register of $175 and then calmly walked out past a customer who had just entered.

At 2:50 p.m., a Negro bandit robbed a second liquor store at 283 Peters St., SW. C. D. Black, an employee, said the gunman ordered him to remove the cash drawer from the register and place it on the counter.

After scooping up the money from the register, Black said the bandit ordered him to hand over his wallet.

The two white men entered the liquor store on Spring street at 4:15 p.m., officers said. Luke Van Sandt, a clerk, said the two ordered a pint of wine, then drew guns and instructed him to lie down in the floor.

Van Sandt said the two looted the cash register, located a cigar box under the counter where money was kept and cleaned it out and then took $37 from his wallet.

Sgt. G. H. Christian and detective N. W. Flanagan said the three were believed to be the same bandits who have struck here repeatedly in recent weeks.

Rains Expected To Taper Off After 8 Days

An eight-day rainfast that dumped 3.81 inches of moisture on Atlanta is expected to taper off under partly cloudy skies and slightly warmer temperatures Saturday afternoon.

Light drizzles are forecast for Saturday morning but should give way by the afternoon. The mercury is expected to bounce up to a 68 high Saturday after a morning low of 50 degrees. Sunday's extremes are tagged at 56 and 76.

The high-low readings recorded in Atlanta Friday were 53 and 61.

U.S. Team Stunned at Soviet Feat

185-Lb. Satellite Dwarfs America's

By WALTER SULLIVAN

(Copyright 1957 by The New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4—Leaders of the United States earth satellite program were astonished tonight to learn that the Soviet Union had launched an earth satellite almost nine times heavier than that contemplated by this country.

Dr. Joseph Kaplan, chairman of the U. S. program for the international geophysical year, described the 185-pound weight as "really fantastic." The heaviest American satellites are to weigh 21.5 pounds.

LAUNCHING EXPECTED

The actual launching, nevertheless, did not surprise American scientists. At the conclusion of working sessions of the international conference on rockets and satellites here today, some of them said they thought the pitching of a Soviet satellite into the sky was imminent.

Teams of visual observers which have been set up throughout the United States, and in some other lands, have been alerted to watch for the satellite. American officials said. They have been organized to watch for spheres flying from west to east.

The planned Soviet orbit is more nearly north-south, and many require a revised seating arrangement for the western observers.

PROJECT MOONWATCH

Organized in "Project Moonwatch," they are now seated on a north-south line, each watching through binoculars or telescope to cover a fixed segment of the meridian.

Stations of the DEW line, the radar-equipped distant early warning system of North American defenses, were reported to be incapable of spotting a target in an orbit 560 miles overhead. The Defense department, asked whether any other system of detecting Ohioian First To Spot Space Ball Over U.S.

BOSTON, Oct. 4 (AP)—The Russian satellite was reported seen for the first time in the United States tonight at Columbus, O.

Satellite 560 Miles In Space

23-In. Ball Zooms At 18,000 mph

MOSCOW, Saturday, Oct. 5 (AP)—

The Soviet Union announced today it has the world's first artificial moon streaking around the globe 560 miles out in space.

A multiple-stage rocket launched the earth satellite yesterday, the Russians said, shooting it upward at about five miles per second.

They said the satellite, a globe described as 23 inches in diameter and weighing 185 pounds, can be seen in its orbit with glasses and followed by radio through instruments it carries.

Radio signals on the wavelength of the Soviet moon—sounding as a deep "beep, beep, beep"—were picked up by electronic engineers of the National Broadcasting Co. in New York and the British Broadcasting Corp. in London.

In thus announcing the launching of the first earth satellite ever put in globe-girdling orbit under man's controls, the Soviet Union claimed a victory over the United States.

SECRET RACE

The two big powers had been in a hot but mainly secret race to be first to probe the high space realms with spheres laden with instruments.

The Moscow announcement said:

"The successful launching of the first man-made satellite makes a tremendous contribution to the treasure house of world science and culture . . .

"Artificial earth satellites will pave the way for space travel and seems that the present generation will witness how the freed and conscious labor of the people of the new Socialist society turns even the most daring of man's dreams into reality . . ."

EVERY 95 MINUTES

In a special bulletin early this morning, the Soviet Tass agency said the Russian moon "is now revolving around the earth at the rate of one circuit every hour and 35 minutes."

The launching occurred just three months and four days after the opening of the International Geophysical Year.

Moscow said the Russians

20,000 Poles Riot To Oust Gomulka

1,000 Police and Militiamen Club Women in Throng

WARSAW, Oct. 4 (AP)—An estimated 20,000 Poles battled club-swinging police and militiamen tonight in central Warsaw. Many of the rioters shouted for the downfall of Communist party chief Wladyslaw Gomulka.

Two separate clashes left a number of persons injured, including some women. It was the second straight night of rioting in the tense Polish capital.

An estimated 1,000 steel-helmeted police and "workers militia" charged with clubs and fired tear-gas bombs to try to break up the rioting. The mobs fought back with their fists, rocks and paving blocks.

Rioting flared viciously for three hours and was still underway at 9 p.m. (3 p.m. e.s.t.) Students surged into the streets and were joined by adults.

Pent-up fury burst after police moved to break up a student protest rally called at the Polytechnic High School. The rally was called to condemn police treatment of students who demonstrated last night against the closing of the anti-Stalinist student weekly "Po Prostu."

POLICE FUTILE

Police charged with clubs to head off the demonstration, but another crowd swiftly formed and marched off to the central committee headquarters of the Polish Communist Party.

Government forces tried vainly to stop the march on the headquarters. Fist fights broke out. Whistles and catcalls against the government spread.

From the party building at a main intersection, the rioting rampaged down adjacent side streets.

TEAR GAS AND 'ZOOTERS'

Witnesses reported the police and militia used tear gas many times in an attempt to stop the angry crowds. Late in the evening, groups of "zoot suiters" became evident in the mass of shouting people.

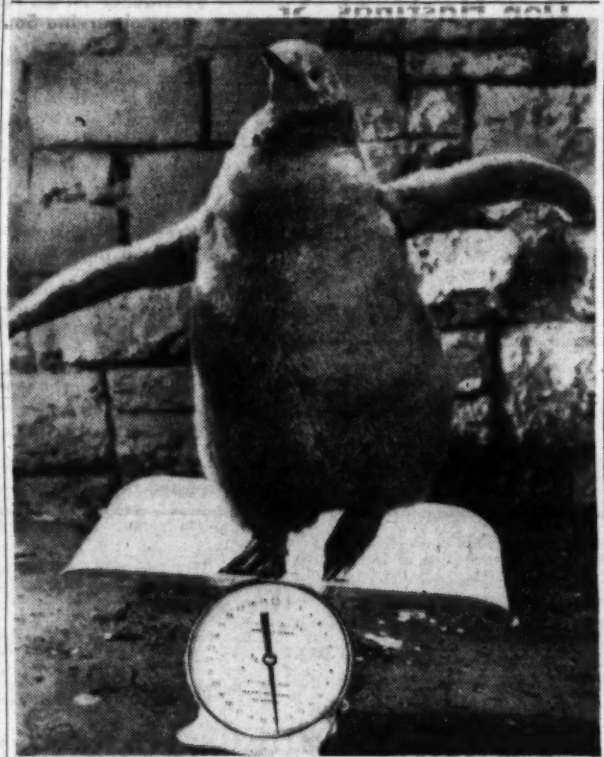

Police cordoned the polytechnic high school in an effort to head off the rally and apparently several thousand students were caught inside.

The secretariat of the Party Central Committee, the top Communist body in Poland, said in a communique tonight that the student newspaper had "falsely and untruthfully presented the economic and political situation in the country, propagating views quite foreign to socialism."

MANY INJURED

Last night's student protest was Warsaw's first major show of public unrest since reorganization of the Polish regime following the Poznan uprising last year.

More than 20 students were reported in a Warsaw hospital today, as a result of last night's rioting and many others were treated by doctors. Seven militiamen were in the militia hospital.

Atom Peace Body Picks American

VIENNA, Oct. 4 (UP)—The new 60-nation "atoms for peace" pool today named Rep. W. Sterling Cole (R-N.Y.) as its guiding officer over Soviet opposition.

The board of directors of the International Atomic Energy Agency, meeting for the first time today, chose Cole as director-general of the agency, which resulted from President Eisenhower's proposal for an international atoms-for-peace program.

His election was unanimous when Russia failed to put up an opposing candidate, despite earlier Soviet declarations that it would never accept an American as head of the group.

Cole, 53, of Bath, N.Y., is former chairman and present ranking Republican member of the U.S. congressional joint Atomic Energy Committee.

His appointment for a four-year term will go before the general conference of the agency next week for approval, which is certain. He said he would resign his House seat to accept the post.

He said he would return to the United States to settle personal affairs before taking up his new position. Permanent headquarters of the new agency will be established in Vienna.

high-flying missiles had seen a target, would not comment.

The satellite must fly at a speed of about 18,000 miles an hour to counteract the force of gravity at that elevation. The initial announcement in Moscow did not clear whether or not the rocket which placed it in orbit was aimed north or south.

This would determine whether or not the satellite's initial crossing of the United States was northbound or southbound.

With an orbit included 65 degrees to the equator, its sweep will cover virtually the entire region between the Arctic and Antarctic circles.

Rear Admiral Rawson Bennett, whose Office of Naval Research is in charge of launching the U.S. satellites, said the U.S. had never envisaged the satellite launching program as "a race." He said that Project Vanguard, the U.S. satellite program, would "proceed as scheduled."

The U.S. is not scheduled to launch its first full-scale satellite until next spring. This fall, however, four small test spheres will be fired as part of the rocket testing program. Some of the test spheres may go into an earth-circling orbit.

U.S. radio tracking stations set up to watch American artificial moons are equipped to monitor on 108 megacycles. The Soviet Union, after agreeing to use equipment "compatible" with the U.S. system, decided to use two lower frequencies.

Extensive modification would be necessary to monitor the Soviet moons, and in any case the frequency is regarded here as too low for accurate tracking by the phasing methods used with American equipment.

The Soviet tracking system, as described at the conference just ending, is based on the Doppler principle. Doppler is the change in frequency similar to the change in pitch of the whistle of a fast-moving locomotive.

The long-delayed firing of Test Vehicle No. 2 of the American satellite program is now scheduled at Cape Canaveral, Fla., within the next five days. Its purpose is to test the first stage rocket. The rest of the bullet-shaped vehicle will be a dummy.

The firing of a three-stage test vehicle is planned this fall and may place a miniature satellite, six inches in diameter, in orbit.

The impression gained by American delegates from five days of meetings with Soviet scientists this week was that the Russians planned to send up a simple-instrumented first satellite before attempting more elaborate observations.

Mollet Key To Crisis In France

PARIS, Oct. 4 (AP)—Socialist Guy Mollet, who set a postwar record by holding the premier's office for 15 months, was virtually drafted by President Rene Coty today to try and form a new government.

He said neither yes or no when asked to be premier, but promised the President to see what support he could rally. He will not give a definite answer until Sunday.

LITTLE PROSPECT

He did not think much of his prospects. He told reporters he did not think it would be possible to form a cabinet. He said he had finally agreed to try only on the President's insistence.

Coty took action on the fourth day of the crisis, which broke Monday when Premier Maurice Bourges-Maunoury was defeated on his Algeria home rule bill.

The naming of Mollet shifted negotiations from the President's Elysee Palace to a narrow street on the left bank where Mollet set up temporary offices near the Malignon Mansion in which he worked until four months ago as premier. The same political figures who had visited Coty during the past three days started filing in and out of Mollet's office. They made the same kind of statements to the same crowd of reporters waiting outside.

2 PREVIOUS CRISES

Since the two previous crises have been provoked by the center groups in the National Assembly, Mollet sought assurances of their support before agreeing to move ahead. There was little chance he would get them.

The Socialists' own minimum program provides for a second attempt to pass the Algeria bill which defeated Bourges-Maunoury, economic controls and price freezes to fight inflation, an improved social security plan and a new deal for agriculture. The economic program is the same that finally drove Mollet out of office last June.

The Socialists thus far have made no mention of constitutional reform, which most party leaders are now convinced must come to give greater executive stability. France has had 23 governments since World War II.

The case reached into Buckingham Palace and recalled frequently-denied rumors of a rift between the duke and Queen Elizabeth themselves.

Mrs. Parker's suit named a "Mrs. Thompson" as third person in the proceedings. Mervyn Lewis, her attorney, revealed that a petition for divorce had been filed and Eric Summer, attorney for the Australian-born Parker, confirmed it.

Parker, a onetime commander in the Royal Navy, was the duke's private secretary until it became known that he and his wife had separated.

Mrs. Parker, reached by telephone, refused to speculate when the divorce might be granted, nor would she say whether she intended to re-marry.

The children will definitely stay with me," she said. "I am afraid that is my only comment."

The Parkers were married in Madrid in 1943. They have two children, 11-year-old Michael and 8-year-old Julie. Both have been in custody of their mother.

Last Feb. 4, while Parker and the Duke were on a world cruise, it was announced that Parker had been dismissed from his job. It was no secret that his marital trouble was the cause.

Queen Elizabeth, as head of the Church of England, cannot condone divorce.

The break came at a time when there were reports—officially denied by Buckingham Palace—that the queen and the duke were having personal difficulties.

Two weeks after Parker was removed, the Duke was elevated to the rank of prince of the United Kingdom and assumed the title Prince Philip.

Turkey Rips Russia Over Syria Arms

ANKARA, Saturday, Oct. 5 (AP)—Turkey today sharply rejected Soviet charges of planned aggression against Syria and publicly challenged Moscow to abandon its own Middle East policy.

The Turkish government released the text of a letter from Premier Menderes to Soviet Premier Bulganin asserting, "Subversive actions in Syria have reached a culminating point."

"This country—Syria—is arming itself speedily and far beyond its logical defensive needs," Menderes said.

"Or rather it perhaps is being turned into an armament depot eventually to be used by others."

"If establishment of the true friendship based on mutual trust between our two countries is desired as you state in your message," the Turkish leader said, "discontinuance of a policy pursued in the Middle East and especially in Syria would greatly contribute to this end."

Menderes' letter was in reply to one from Bulganin Sept. 13 accusing Turkey of threatening to provoke a third world war by massing troops on the Syrian border for what he called an American-planned attack.

The 25-year-old former Marine fighter pilot took off from Galveston Thursday in an attempt to better the 1949 record for a hop to Rome in a single-engine plane. It was set by William Odom.

He had made roughly 2,000 miles from Texas before deciding to end his flight here.

plan to launch several more earth satellites in the next year.

Moscow said the satellite is fitted with steel radio transmitters continuously sending signals earthward on the 15 and 7.5 meter wave lengths and easily received by a broad range of amateur sets. Its announced weight of about 185 pounds is more than eight times the weight of a projected U.S. earth satellite.

Moscow described the signals as about 3/10 of a second long with a pause of the same length. The two frequencies alternate in signalling, Moscow radio said.

The broadcast said Soviet satellites planned later will be bigger and heavier than the first sphere.

U.S. EXPERTS AMAZED

U. S. experts in Washington were amazed at the reported size of the Soviet moon. Dr. Joseph Kaplan, chairman of the U. S. National Committee for the International Geophysical Year said its 185-pound weight and 23-inch span "is really fantastic. 'If they can launch that they can launch much heavier ones,' he said.

The U. S. experts figured the first U. S. launching attempt would be made early next spring after an attempt to put some 6.4 inch, 4-pound objects into the earth's orbit for a short time in November.

Russia had been silent on the progress of its experiments since last June 19 when a news conference in Moscow was told Russian scientists planned to launch one or more satellites during the IGY that began July 1.

SEND CONGRATULATIONS

U. S. spokesmen said last May the United States did not plan a secret launching and hoped the Russians didn't either. But U. S. officials were quick to congratulate the Russians on the announced feat.

The Moscow broadcast said Soviet scientific stations were still trying to determine the flying sphere's exact trajectory. It said that because the density of the rarified upper layers is not accurately known there are no data to determine the points of the satellite's entry into the denser strata.

The broadcast added, however, that its tremendous velocity will cause the satellite to burn up on reaching the denser layers.

TEXT OF BROADCAST

The Moscow broadcast quoted the official Tass news agency as saying:

"For several years research and experimental designing work has been under way in the Soviet Union to create artificial satellites of the earth.

"It has already been reported in the press that the launching of the earth satellites in the U.S.S.R. was planned in accordance with the program of the International Geophysical Year research."

"As a result of the intensive work by research institutes and designing bureaus the first artificial earth satellite in the world has now been created.

"This first satellite was successfully launched in the U.S.S.R. on Oct. 4."

ELLIPTICAL TRAJECTORY

The broadcast said the satellite is revolving around the earth now on an elliptical trajectory at an estimated height of 900 kilometers—about 560 miles.

Moscow radio described the satellite as "in the form of a sphere 58 centimeters—about 23 inches—in diameter, weighs 83.6 kilograms—about 185 pounds—and carries a radio transmitter."

"According to preliminary information the carrier rocket has imparted to the satellite the required orbital velocity—of about 8,000 meters—about 26,246 feet—a second."

"At the present time the satellite is describing elliptical trajectories around the earth."

"It's flight will be observed in the rays of the rising and setting sun with the aid of the simplest optical instruments such as binoculars and spy glasses."

Release of FBI Report Left to Judge Davies

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4 (AP)—The White House said today that release of secret FBI reports on the origin of violence in Little Rock is up to Federal District Judge Ronald N. Davies.

Davies, who ordered the go-ahead for integration at Central High School, requested FBI agents to prepare the reports after Gov. Orval E. Faubus warned that admission of nine Negro students would provoke violence.

GOP Gov. Theodore McKeldin of Maryland appealed to the government yesterday to "reveal all" it knows about the origin of the Little Rock disturbances.

McKeldin was one of the four Southern governors who drew up a plan, which later fell through, for withdrawal of federal troops from Little Rock. He has blamed Faubus for much of the current difficulty.

But Justice Department sources indicated there might be objection to giving out information which might be used later in expected court action against leaders of the stormy attempt to block integration at Central High.

White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty told newsmen today that separate reports on the Little Rock situation are made almost daily to the White House by the Justice Department. He could not comment when asked if this information would be released.

But he said the separate FBI reports requested by Davies on origin of the violence were submitted to the judge personally and it would be up to him to release them.

He also said there had been no recent contact between the White House and the special committee of Southern governors. Hagerty made the statement just before President Eisenhower went to Gettysburg, Pa., for the weekend.

Flu Strikes 200,000 In Week

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4 (UP)—The U. S. Public Health Service today reported an outbreak of 200,000 cases of influenza last week in such scattered areas as Louisiana, California, Georgia, Arizona, Alabama and Illinois. Georgia's increase was reported as 50 per cent.

No breakdown between Asian flu and other influenza strains was given. But the new cases brought to 422,650 the number of attacks of all types of influenza reported since the first case of Asian flu last summer.

HIT HARD

Louisiana was hit particularly hard. The state health department reported 41 flu deaths in the first eight months of the year. But Dr. Ben Freedman, director of preventive medicine for the department, said laboratory tests showed Asian flu was not the killer.

The U. S. Public Health Service report placing the number of flu cases so far this year at 422,650 did not include the large number of flu-type illnesses reported in the past day or two in such cities as New York and Milwaukee, the World Series cities.

One health official said New York may be in for a month-long siege of the flu. He said there was little chance there would be enough vaccine to help New York or residents of Milwaukee due to the fast spread of the disease.

Two apparent influenza deaths were reported in New York. But neither of the victims, a 3-year-old girl and a 42-year-old British seaman, were definitely known to be stricken with Asian flu. About one out of every six New York school students stayed home.

School children appeared to be the most susceptible victims in a number of communities. Two parochial schools were closed in Rockford, Ill., and Grand Rapids, Mich., counted 4,000 parochial and public school students absent.

ABSENTEEISM CLIMBS

The U. S. health service, reporting for the nation as a whole, said school absenteeism climbed to 20 per cent of total enrollment in several areas during the week ended Sept. 28.

In one Washington, D.C., area school, 83 per cent of the student body was ill. Some cases were positively identified as Asian flu, a process that takes about 10 days of laboratory tests.

Alabama reported a six-fold increase in flu cases over the previous week and Arizona a "marked increase." Illinois and Washington State each reported "over 1,000" new cases of acute respiratory infections during the week.

New Dallas Integration Hearing Set

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 4 — The U. S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals today ordered a joint hearing on two phases of the Dallas, Tex., school integration suit.

The court set the hearing for Nov. 22 in U. S. District Court at Fort Worth, Tex.

Involved are: 1. An application by the Dallas School Board for permission to file for a writ of mandamus to force the district court to slow down the integration order.

2. An appeal by the board from the order.

The Dallas School Board contends U. S. Dist. Judge William Atwell of Dallas abused his judicial power. Atwell on Sept. 19 ordered the school board to desegregate for the second half of this school year. On two previous occasions, Atwell dismissed suits to desegregate Dallas schools but was reversed both times by the appeals court here.

The school board said Atwell was moving too fast and asked that the Appeals Court wipe out his order.

Satellite Will Disclose Earth's Precise Shape

Moon's Orbit Should Reveal Secrets of Planet's Density, Too

(Copyright 1957 by The New York Times Co.)
WASHINGTON, Oct. 4—The artificial moon now in orbit and those to follow should give man his first information on the precise shape of his planet and the lumpiness of its interior.

These are among the chief objectives in the costly Soviet and American satellite programs. If the earth was a perfect sphere with a uniform density the satellite orbits would be symmetrical.

The earth, however, flattens toward the poles. Its interior, at least in the region immediately below the surface, is irregular in density. Hence surveyor's plumb bobs and bubble levels do not indicate the true vertical. They are oriented by gravity, whose direction of pull varies with the density of the earth below.

SATELLITE'S ORBIT

Precise observation of the satellite orbit will provide a worldwide picture of these anomalies.

By watching the rate at which the satellite slows down it will also be possible to determine how much air there is on the fringe of space. Study of its radio signals should show the average number of electrons in the region between the satellite and the earth.

The radio signal from the satellite is bent as it passes through the electron-charged ionized layers of the atmosphere. The lower the frequency the more it bends. By using two frequencies, one double the other, the Russians hope to determine the difference in bending and thus the electron density.

The American satellite program calls for a similar experiment, but using high-precision observation of the satellites with a special camera as a basis of comparison with the radio beam.

AMERICAN CAMERAS

Only one of these American cameras is currently in operation and the 11 others scheduled for study of satellite orbits may not all be working by next summer. The Soviet Union apparently does not have any such cameras and has expressed an interest in those being made here.

It would probably be impossible to deliver any to the Russians before the end of the International Geophysical Year. The satellite programs are part of the worldwide study of the earth and its environment.

The lifetime of the Soviet satellite will presumably depend on its altitude at the lowest point of its elliptical orbit. The Moscow announcement merely said the highest point of the orbit was 560 miles.

Two days ago a Soviet scientist, reputed to be one of Moscow's leading missile specialists, told the satellite conference here that a satellite with maximum elevation of 500 miles and a minimum elevation of 125 miles would only last three days.

He was Academician A. A. Blagonravov, chief of the Soviet delegation to the conference.

There is enough air at an elevation of 125 miles to slow down the satellite appreciably every time around. Once it loses the speed necessary to counteract gravity it will plunge downward as a fireball or break up into smaller pieces. Each of the latter presumably will be consumed like a meteor or reach the earth like a flaming meteorite.

MODEL OF SATELLITE—NEW YORK, Oct. 4—

This is a full-size model of man-made satellite recently displayed by the U.S. Navy. It is shown here in cut-away form with plastic cover over its working parts. It is 20 inches in diameter and fully-loaded weighs about 21 pounds. Here is the key to letters and numbers as put on the various parts by the Navy: (A) Cell, operating on energy from sun, to reset recording device on each orbit around earth; (B) Ultra-violet detector; (C) Oxides to measure temperature; (D) Erosion gauge to measure impact of collisions with foreign objects; (1) Transmitter for relaying data to earth; (2) Amplifier to detect collision with micro-meteorites; (3) Storage unit to record data from amplifier; (4) Device for transmitting scientific data to a ground station; (5) Memory Unit, to give data stored up during an orbit as satellite passes over recording stations; (6) Current amplifier to measure ionization from ultra-violet radiation, and (7) Mercury batteries for power supply.

Satellite Visible With Binoculars At Dawn or Dusk, U.S. Expert Says

(Copyright 1957 by The New York Times Co.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 4—A member of the U.S. satellite panel said tonight that the Russian satellite should be visible with binoculars at dawn or dusk.

The scientist, Dr. Homer E. Newell Jr., said it would not quite be visible to the naked eye at its 560-mile altitude.

The artificial moon will reflect the rays of the sun, and these will be distinguishable only when the rest of the sky is relatively dark.

The observer with binoculars will obviously have to know in what direction to train his glasses and at what moment.

The reflected rays of the sun will bounce off the satellite and travel in a line straight to the eye of the observer. One advantage of having a spheroidal satellite is that observers quite far from one another will pick up rays shooting off from the surface at divergent angles.

Dr. Newell said that the amount of light that could be reflected to any one observer would put the satellite in about the class of a sixth-magnitude star.

The brightest stars are classed as stars of first magnitude. Those of second magnitude are half as bright. Those of third magnitude are half as bright as those of second magnitude, and so on.

The reason brightness diminishes with distance is that the rays fade out. The farther away an observer is, the fewer the number of rays he will intercept. Binoculars, by reaching out toward a denser section, will pick up a larger bundle of rays. Dr. Newell said no human eye could pick up any star beyond one of the sixth magnitude.

Thieves Get $800 Loot, Miss $2,642

Burglars struck a blow at Robert M. Jones Friday but Jones figured he had the last laugh.

At Jones' summer home on Pebblebrook road in Cobb County, thieves ripped burglar bars off a window. They also smashed through the front door.

They carted off a new television set, a typewriter, a radio, a toaster and other appliances together with Jones' clothing.

Jones estimated their loot at from $800 to $1,000. What the thieves didn't know, however, was that they walked all over $2,642 in cold cash.

West Seeks Support for Disarming

Woo Diplomats To U.N. Stand

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 4

—The Western Powers today held back a resolution endorsing their disarmament proposals so they could get the broadest possible backing before submitting it to the U.N. General Assembly.

Some informed diplomats had predicted it would be handed in here today. But a U.S. source told a reporter it would be delayed till Monday at the earliest to give a few prospective sponsors time to get instructions from home enabling them to sign it.

20 SPONSORS

He said it would have "in the neighborhood of 20" sponsors covering a wide geographical range. That would constitute almost a quarter of the 82 delegations sitting in the Assembly. But the resolution would need a two-thirds vote for final passage.

India, Japan and the Soviet Union have turned in rival resolutions that would have the Assembly call for suspension of nuclear tests, subject to inspection but prior to actual disarmament.

The Western resolution, the U.S. source said, would approve the proposals that Britain, Canada, France and the United States made to the Soviet Union. Aug. 29 in the U.N. Disarmament subcommittee's private talks in London, recessed Sept. 6. It would commend them to the subcommittee, he added, as the basis for urgent new negotiations.

ON SUSPENSION

These proposals call for suspension of nuclear tests only when agreement has been reached to stop using atomic materials for weapons, cut down armed forces, work on a comprehensive inspection system and institute other "partial measures of disarmament."

The U.S. informant said he did not think any such change had yet been suggested. He declined to predict what attitude the United States would take if it were. But he declared, "We feel that the resolution is a good one and we hope the General Assembly will adopt it as it is."

Last February the United States participated in a compromise under which the Assembly adopted a resolution handing over all pending disarmament proposals to the subcommittee for "prompt attention."

U.S. Experts Hail Russian Achievement

FROM WIRE REPORTS

Satellite experts at the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory in Cambridge, Mass., Friday night termed the Russian launching of an earth satellite "a great achievement."

Dr. Fred L. Whipple, observatory director, said, "There is no doubt about it, it was a great achievement on their part and I congratulate them on it."

American scientists in general showed no rancor that they had been beaten into space by their Soviet counterparts.

P. H. Wyckoff, a member of the U.S. International Geophysical Year committee, said at the Soviet embassy reception, "We are all elated that it is up there."

"We expect to work with the Soviets to obtain the available data," he said. "They have been very good to us, telling us about the frequencies and other information about tracking the satellite. We are very happy for them."

Dr. Joseph Kaplan of the U.S. committee said: "It certainly is the most interesting experience of my life."

Hugh Odishaw, executive director of the U.S. Committee for the International Geophysical Year and official spokesman on American satellite affairs, also said this country awaited "with interest the definition of a specific orbit" for the man-made moon.

In his statement Odishaw, head of the American IGY committee, said:

"The launching of the USSR satellite as reported this evening is of great scientific interest. We await with interest the definition of a specific orbit and details of their scientific experiments."

Georgia Rates 39th In Teacher Salaries

Georgia stands 39th in the nation in average salaries paid its classroom teachers.

The Department of Education announced Friday that a national study reveals the average salary throughout the country is $4,230 a year. Georgia's average is $3,275.

New York leads the states with an average salary of $5,550 and Arkansas is last with $2,380.

Averages are based on 1956-57 pay scales.

Teamsters Thumb Noses at Decency

No one who has upheld the cause of labor through the years can view the action of the Teamsters Union in electing James R. Hoffa to succeed Dave Beck as president as anything except a near calamity. The whole sickening spectacle at Miami has damaged organized labor more than any event in a generation.

The action amounts to approval of the misdeeds of the union's officers, including Hoffa's, as recorded day after day in the McClellan committee hearings. It also dismissed the AFL-CIO indictment of corruption as of no moment.

Hoffa and the other leaders, who had the election rigged long before the convention, have, in effect, been told by the convention to go forth and feather their nests. No decent citizen can feel anything but outrage and humiliation at this mass disregard of morals, ethics and decent principles.

As for organized labor itself, the AFL-CIO can do no other than suspend the huge Teamster organization. This action may result in a split among the Teamsters themselves, as shown by a recent poll which showed its membership opposed to Hoffa by 3-to-1. AFL-CIO officials have indicated they may form a rival union, which means widespread labor disturbances and jurisdictional arguments.

Hoffa himself has announced his intention to seek an alliance with the discredited International Longshoremen's Association and others outside the federation. He wants to tie up the entire transportation industry. If he succeeds, there will be trouble indeed.

It is to the credit of the AFL-CIO that it did attempt to clean the Teamster house. The failure, as shown in the results of the election, will be reflected in a change in the whole national attitude toward organized labor. Public opinion will force Congress to end such flagrant abuses of public morality and the dictatorial, corrupt practices which investigation of the Teamsters disclosed.

This insult to the moral sensibilities of the American people is unbelievable. It will not be overlooked.

Your Newspaperboy Is A Good Citizen, Too

"Delivering papers and spending the money as you collect it is one way of wasting your time and profits. But delivering papers and collecting your money; first paying your paper bill and banking the rest will show great profits for you."

That's the advice of a couple of young capitalists who evidently don't intend to be behind the door when opportunities come their way.

The quote appeared in the September issue of The Carrier, published for and about newspaperboys who deliver the Atlanta newspapers to several hundred thousand families daily. Its authors are Everett and Elvin Rouse, twins who have a route in Atlanta. The twins are sixth graders who have had a paper route since 1953.

"Having a paper route," they wrote, "is just like running a business. In fact it is a business. And a profitable one if you run it right."

The youngsters thus express what thousands of others have learned before them through their experience as newspaperboys. They are learning to accept responsibility, to take pride in accomplishment and to work for the reward which comes therefrom.

All of which is intended to remind readers of The Constitution that today is National Newspaperboys Day and that the youngster who may have delivered your paper this morning is learning to take his place as a contributing, constructive member of a free society. He is learning democracy, his rights and responsibilities, and having fun doing it.

We join in tribute to these splendid youngsters who today are performing a major public service in helping to keep the public informed. Remember them when you read your newspaper today and give them a boost now and then.

Kasper's Presence Was A Sobering Reminder

Frederick John Kasper, agitator and rabble-rouser and inciter of violence, was on hand Tuesday when the four Southern governors arrived for their conference with President Eisenhower.

It isn't quite clear just who or what he was picketing, but Kasper was there just as he was at Clinton, Tenn., to play his trade of hate-mongering and seeking publicity. He was there just as he was in Nashville, Tenn., to take advantage of the unhappiness and genuine anguish of the few people who knew no better than to fall for his line.

It would be fine if professional agitators like Kasper merely could be ignored. But the trail of hate and violence they leave behind cannot be. This strange native of Camden, N.J., former student at Columbia University and former resident of Greenwich Village, has been found all over the South whenever and wherever he thinks trouble is brewing.

Who pays his bills? Nobody really knows. He spends much time in jail for contempt of court, for inciting to violence and vagrancy. And yet Tuesday he showed up at the White House to picket those who sought some common ground for approaching the problem upon which he capitalizes. His presence merely reminded the nation of the mobs who would substitute violence for law.

Kasper doesn't speak for the South. He isn't even remotely Southern. And those who play his game make more and more difficult the task of all who would avoid such disasters as that of Little Rock.

Georgians Look North For a Bulldog Victory

All Georgians will be hoping for an upset today as Georgia's improving football team meets the Michigan eleven in Ann Arbor.

With Georgia Tech's Jackets idle, the state will give all ears to the radio account of Coach Wallace Butts' team in what is one of the day's top intersectional contests. The Georgians showed much improvement in their second game.

Chief hope of an upset lies in the fact that Michigan is looking ahead to its greatest state rival one week hence and may take the contest this afternoon a little too casually.

At any rate, some 3,500,000 Georgians will be rooting for them while they make the big try.

Horace Ingram Episode Served Useful Purpose

The cloud of suspicion that has hung over the Atlanta Police Department was lightened Thursday when all accused police officers were found not guilty in the Horace Ingram lottery conspiracy trial in federal court.

Ingram and nine other persons were found guilty of conspiring to evade federal revenue laws on gambling. Three of the federally exonerated police officers still face trial in Fulton Superior Court on charges of bribery and another of them in federal court on a perjury charge.

The federal trial was long and so were the jury's deliberations. But it served a useful purpose in separating the innocent from the guilty and focusing upon the real and potential evils the lottery racket breeds.

The entire episode should result, in the long run, in a better police department. The movement in that direction already has begun with a general tightening up, formation of an area vice squad and other measures. The vice squad, a cooperative effort, has been most effective.

The lesson for the future is clear. Atlanta must never again allow lottery to gain the foothold it was enjoying here. Only through constant policing and co-operation from the courts, public officials and the public itself can lottery and other rackets remain throttled in the community. The police must be the first line of defense and it must never waver.

This Keeping of Pets Needs Closer Scrutiny

Stories originating at various places in the land suggest it is about time for city government to redraft ordinances regarding the keeping of pets.

The stories concern pets-at-large. A five-foot alligator was on the loose for days in a north Georgia city. The owners were concerned lest something happen to the reptile. The neighbors must have been a little upset, too, though not with the same anxiety.

Miami, Fla., is giving attention to a problem created by the domestication of alligators, of a fierce fish called a piranha, and the like.

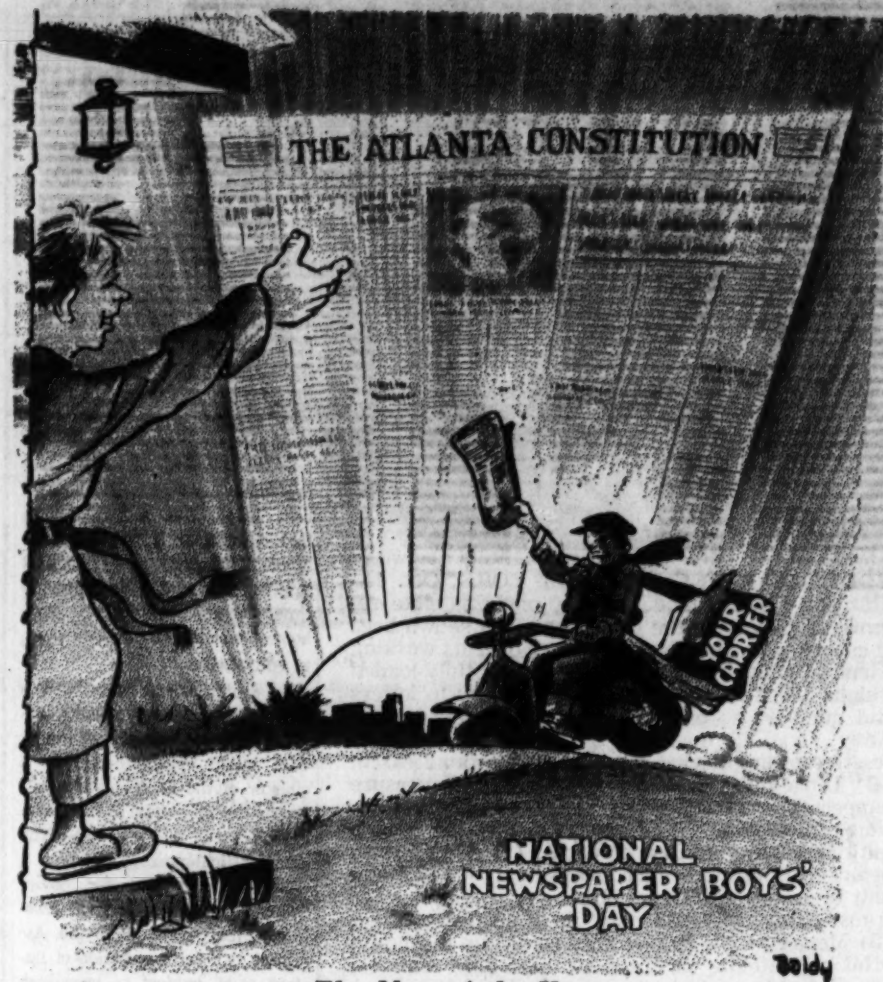

The last we heard from Ewing Township, N.J., the judge was studying whether to let a resident keep a lion in his back yard.

The Ewing Township ordinance outlawing farm animals within the city limits but it doesn't say a word about the jungle and zoo variety.

The lion's owner says he likes big pets. A neighbor objects that the lion roars at night.

So you're upset because the neighbor's dog keeps you awake?

Brother, you'd better go to the city hall and check the code book. The man might decide to acquire a laughing hyena.

Michigan Resident Thinks Negro Himself Must Provide the Key to His Own Destiny

Ann Arbor, Mich.—Out of the voluminous mass of details connected with the integration issue, it seems as if one facet lost sight of by the integration forces in their dogmatic drive to amalgamate the black and white races is the right of Southern whites to a way of life of their own. It isn't the sole heritage of the Southern Negro, as the integration group would lead us to believe.

As a practicable matter, sentiment in favor of providing the Negro with a better way of life probably is as strong and as far-reaching in the South as it is in the North. Sentiment, however, hasn't been permitted to supersede practical considerations in the important particulars in either section of the country, as may be evidenced on every hand in the Northern tier of states.

In the meantime, the right to the fulfillment of a sentimental objective is no more of an answer to a social puzzle than an unheeded bayonet and any argument to the contrary can be relegated to the wastepaper basket as "kid stuff."

It seems as if the Negro, and the Negro alone, must provide the key to his own destiny. All of the rest of us have the same limitations imposed on us. Why should the Negro possess greater privileges than the white person?

Dwight David's Toss Of 'Little Rock' Hit

Knoxville—David of the Bible used a little rock and killed a giant. David Eisenhower used a "Little Rock" and what did he kill?

History and posterity will answer that question. I believe history will show "Little Rock" knocked much of the greatness from the stature of Dwight David Eisenhower.

CHESTER BRYANT.

Deep South Citizen Backs the President

Decatur — In the Little Rock case the local school board took the initiative to integrate the high school. They had made their own plan to integrate gradually the entire school. If there was violent objection to integration it would have been generally known. The mayor, the chief of police and the school superintendent testified in court that they heard of no threats of violence.

The governor said he ordered out the National Guard in order to prevent violence. But all the National Guard did was to prevent nine colored students from entering the high school. Did he need an armed force to stop nine students?

The action of the governor encouraged the mob to think integration should be stopped by violent action.

The President did not make the law but if the school board wanted to integrate and the local and state authorities could not stop violence the President's oath of office required him to use the power at his disposal to maintain order.

What Will the Reds Come Up With Next?

Atlanta—It is very unfortunate for us to acknowledge the fact that the Russians have been very successful on the propaganda front, even if they continuously resort to the use of deceitful methods. In fact, the means have been so distorted that the Russians have claimed most of the inventions of the world as being of Russian origin, to such an extent that most of the students at Moscow University have been stating publicly that "Adam and Eve were also Communists."

When one of the American youths visiting Moscow recently asked his counterpart why he believed Adam and Eve to be Communists, the Muscovite answered:

The South Won't Tolerate Violent Acts of Mobsters

In attacking this problem of segregation-vs-integration, two avenues are open to individuals and groups. They can, on either side of the question, employ the rules of fair play or mobism, with all of its chicanery, meanness and brutality. We think it is time to put the South on record with its true feelings.

The section is very strong—and emotionally so—on the principle of maintaining a separation of the races while giving each its own equal rights and opportunities. The South is almost solidly opposed to President Eisenhower's use of federal troops in Arkansas as a tragedy which threatens the very foundation of the nation and the inherent right of states to self-government. Yet, in order that the world might know, the South is just as strongly opposed to destruction and mobism as it is to the ill-advised efforts to force integration upon the territory.

The opposition to integration does not, as some characters would like to believe, give anyone or any group a license to destroy and terrorize. The people of the South have been among this country's most patriotic and loyal citizens and the South has

The roads are but two: Fair and foul. Real Southerners will take the former route and they will help hunt down those who take the detour.

New Book Offers Fresh Perspective

During the present generation hundreds of books have been published on the general themes of improving one's life, developing one's character and enlarging one's personality. Some people say that this trend in bookmaking goes back to Dale Carnegie's best-seller, "How to Win Friends and Influence People," but actually the self-help enthusiasm came earlier.

It is not a fad, as we have been told so often, for it has persisted too long. Actually the reason we have turned more and more to this kind of book lies in the fact that most of us are mightily concerned about ourselves. And this is one of the finest, most healthy things about us.

Many factors have contributed to this self-concern and desire to improve. I expect that the modern sciences, psychology, sociology and perhaps even economics have helped us to understand ourselves better and to know better our human potentialities. It may be that the world crises since 1914 have made us long for ways to improve our human lot. Surely, too, the religious groups have found within their various traditions deep springs of personality development. This has given a wonderful new dimension of the life of the religious community.

These reflections have run through my mind as I have been reading a new book with a new perspective. The title is "Making the Most of What Life Brings" and the publisher is Harper & Brothers. The author is Dr. Theodore F. Adams, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Richmond and president of the Baptist World Alliance.

This book centers in many vital aspects of personality which other books have bypassed but which Dr. Adams considers in a constructive, inspiring manner. How can we meet the various exigencies which life brings? This is the burden of the author's thought. Many of these exigencies are really trivial matters which grow from molehills into mountains and bring to life unsteadiness and instability.

One chapter title reads, "Making the Most of Life's Interruptions." The next concerns life's imperatives. Other chapters show how we can make the most of life's inequalities, imperfections, inevitabilities, inspirations. I like especially the guidance he gives in regard to life's leftovers, perhaps because I'd never thought of the values we may find in the fragments, in unwanted situations and persons.

Dr. Adams is a pastor whose influence reaches around the globe. What he says naturally comes within the framework of a workable practical application of basic Christian faith to these situations which life brings, sooner or later to every one of us. He shows us that nothing in life is beyond the love and care of God, and nothing falls beyond the Gospel which Jesus taught.

To all of our knowledge of human nature and to all our healthy concern about our personalities, he adds the resources of God. God plus man is always better than our dependence alone upon the ingenuity and wisdom, however splendid, of only man.

82 Nations Launch Atoms-for-Peace

VIENNA—For the whole world to see and from which to take some hope, a light broke through the clouds of the cold war in Vienna this week. Admittedly it is a faintly glimmering light which out if it so decide.

For 12 frustrating years the great powers have been unable to find any way to put a check-rein on atoms-for-war.

Now at last the more powerful nations and the weaker nations, the wealthier and the poorer nations, are joining to speed and spread the benefits of atoms-for-peace.

This, it seems to me, is the largest meaning of what some 200 correspondents from both sides of the Iron Curtain are witnessing here: The birth of this International Atomic Energy Agency which before long 82 governments will join.

Let it be clear that this is a modest, minute, uncertain beginning. But it is a real beginning. It has a tremendous potential. Nuclear disarmament may still be a long way off. Certainly the stalemate at London suggests that Moscow is not much interested in disarmament. But what is happening here at Vienna can produce a small break-through on one front of the cold war. Here are three concrete things, the Soviets willing, which are in the making:

1. The world's atomic pool created a new method and a new framework of international co-operation which will be as non-political as the Communists will permit.

2. The nations which most need atomic power, the nations where conventional power is at stake as in Latin America, Asia and areas of Western Europe, will now have the prospect of getting it sooner.

3. The lease of fissionable materials from the world bank will bring into being a system of inspection and control to be sure that the new U-235 is not diverted for weapons. This may be a valuable proving ground for the kind of inspection which would be useful for nuclear disarmament.

It may well be that President Eisenhower's "atoms for peace" concept will, in the end, prove to be the most beneficent and the most remembered achievement of the Eisenhower era.

Struggle of Titans Starts in California

SACRAMENTO, Calif.—In this most spectacular of all the 48 states a struggle has begun that promises to provide the nation with a gaudy political spectacle. Sen. William F. Knowland, determined, tireless, ambitious, is challenging Gov. Goodwin J. Knight, equally determined, tireless and ambitious, for the governorship.

What makes the contest so important for the Republican Party, not only in the state but in the nation, is that it draws the line between Eisenhower Republicans and Taft Republicans.

The Democrats, who have captured the top office in California only once in the past 20 years although they lead in registration roughly three to two, are sitting back hoping that the two factions will kill each other off. This will give them an opportunity to move in with great expectations for 1960 and after.

In Knight, who is seeking reelection to a second full term—he succeeded to the governorship when Earl Warren became chief justice of the United States—Knowland has taken on a formidable foe.

The governor is busy putting his brand on the formula that has succeeded so well for him and for Warren before him. It is a generally progressive line, shrewdly tailored to the expanding needs of this extraordinary state that is growing at the rate of half a million persons a year, two-thirds of them coming in from every part of the United States.

Stopping just short of the "Modern Republican" label, Knight wants to leave no one in doubt that he is the Eisenhower man in this race. He is telling audiences around the state that he has never opposed the President and at the same time he ering and made pictures of discussion groups and other activities, including one showing a white woman dancing with a Negro man.

Williams placed 35 of Friend's pictures in the record as "exhibits" to document his charges. He also distributed to members of the commission a four-page, newspaper-size pamphlet containing many of the pictures and details of his charges against Highlander School and the bi-racial meeting.

"Since 1928, there has been a history of Communist subversion and the race situation in the South," Williams said.

"The leader of every major race incident that has taken place since the Supreme Court's (anti-segregation) decision up to the present date were at this meeting," Williams said.

He identified the "incidents" as the Montgomery bus boycott, the Tuskegee, Ala., boycott; the Tallahassee bus boycott; the Clinton, Tenn., school incident; Koinonia farms (near Americus, Ga.) interracial violence and the "March on Washington" by Negro leaders earlier this year.

Williams did not give the commission any details on what took place in the discussions held at the Montague meeting. But the pamphlet he distributed said the participants "discussed methods and tactics of precipitating racial strife and disturbance."

Among the Georgians that Williams said attended the meeting were Fred Routh, an "official" of the Southern Regional Council in Atlanta; Eddie Lee Johnson of Atlanta; and Conrad Browne, described by Williams as a "Koinonia Farm Leader" of Americus.

He said others present included Rosa Parks, a key figure in the Montgomery bus boycott; the Rev. John B. Thompson, chaplain of the University of Chicago; Maurice McCracken, affiliated with Neighborhood House of Cincinnati, Ohio; Ralph Helstein, a labor leader; and Myles Horton, director of the Highlander School since its establishment 25 years ago.

In recent months the internal revenue service revoked Highlander's tax exempt status as a school. It said its action was taken because Highlander "is not operated exclusively for educational purposes" and that the institution supports or opposes political candidates, legislation and reforms through "organized action."

and some politician of the North or West," Fowler declared.

Fowler has said previously that Northern or Western politicians in favor of integration would receive first attention under his plan.

"I know that every citizen of Georgia would like to help in this worthwhile movement that will point up the southern problem to other parts of this country," he said Friday.

The Douglas County lawmaker's announcement came after a conference between Cook, Augusta politician Roy V. Harris, State Welfare Director Alan Kemper and Fowler.

Cook said that if the resettlement plan were set up as a state agency, it would require an amendment to overcome the constitutional prohibition of gratuities, Fowler reported.

Kemper, Harris and Fowler will be incorporators.

Kemper described the foundation as a "non-profit, charitable eleemosynary corporation."

Fowler said he had already received a large number of letters promising contributions.

The Three Faces of Eve

One Eve Halted Other's Suicide

and so didn't "have to bother with the dumb muttonhead."

Fortunately we were able to interview Eve White's parents several times during this period. Through them, through Eve White's sisters, her cousin Flo, and through other members of the family, we were able to obtain valuable historic detail of the patient's life.

We were both surprised and dubious when Eve Black told us she had enjoyed an independent life ever since Eve White's childhood. She told us freely of episodes 20 or more years ago in which she had allegedly emerged, usually to engage in acts of mischief or disobedience.

Since Eve White, whose word on any matter always proved good, had no access to the other's current awareness or her memory, it was impossible through her to check directly and immediately on Eve Black's stories. Her memory did, however, confirm reports of certain punishments she had received in childhood, of accusations made against her for deeds unknown to her but described to us by Eve Black.

SOBER, RELIABLE PEOPLE

Some of these stories were substantiated through the parents and other members of the family. Eve White's parents impressed us as sober, reliable people, conservative citizens of a small rural community.

The mother and father both clearly recalled several incidents that Eve Black had previously reported to us. They had had to punish their ordinarily good 6-year-old daughter for having disobeyed their specific rule against wandering through the woods to play with the children of a tenant farmer whose house was approximately a half mile away. On her return Eve had received a hearty whipping despite her desperate and persistent denials of wrongdoing and disobedience.

Almost as surprising as disobedience and lying in such a good child was the daring with which she had wandered home through the darkening woods. Eve was timid and had for some time shown abnormal fear about going near the ditch under the bridge where a man had been found dead. This evening she had boldly leered there.

IMMUNE TO PAIN

Eve Black had previously described this incident to us in some detail, expressing satisfaction and amusement about having "come out" to engage in and thoroughly enjoy the forbidden adventure, and particularly in having been able to withdraw and leave the other Eve, to appreciate the sensations of the whipping.

Though Eve Black, when "in," preserved a considerable degree of indirect awareness of the outer world through Eve White's thoughts and perceptions. She insisted that she was totally immune from any physical pain suffered by the latter and from any to support Bonnie. Ralph was going to a city in another state with the intention of starting over in his business.

After the interview with Eve White, the other Eve was summoned. She first expressed pleasure in the plans for separation.

"Maybe the poor old gal will get some sense in her yet," she said with an easy smile. No, she had not exaggerated what she wrote about in her note. She had been aware of her alternate's thoughts as they progressed and accumulated to the awful resolution.

"She must have been half dazed, I guess," this Eve said, now a little more intent than usual. "She started into the bathroom and was so worked up she could hardly find her way. I could tell she was going after the razor and was going to cut her wrist. Not just a little cut, like I might do if I really wanted to carry on. She was going to kill herself."

"Whether she remembered it or not, I knew nobody'd be back for an hour or two to do anything about it. She'd be dead by then." Pausing now, as she shifted a little in the chair, she added wistfully, "And that would have meant I'd be dead, too."

During the struggle to "get out," Eve Black said, it had seemed for a while that she might fail. "Something awful was on my mind, something I never was against before."

Shaking and uncoordinated but with unswerving resolution, Eve White had banged open the medicine chest and seized the stiff single-edged razor blade. Apparently wild with haste, she had lost hold of the blade. The other hand, fumbling to regain possession, knocked it to the floor beyond a clothes basket.

"She'd already grabbed it again and was about to cut when I finally got out," Eve Black said. "I think she meant business, Doc."

GOT A JOB

Approximately a week later, the household having been disbanded, Eve White began work with a large corporation located only about 15 miles from our offices. She had found a better-than-average opening there.

She found a room in a modest boarding house which she planned to share with another girl.

Was such a move as this merely progress from the frying pan into the fire? In her present condition would she be able to hold this job? Or any job? Freed from whatever restraining influence the Whites' home may have imposed upon her, what would Eve Black now do?

Was it possible that such a manifestation as Eve Black might come out to stay?

Tomorrow: Eve White has trouble holding a job because of Eve Black's mischievousness.

(From the book The Three Faces of Eve, copyright 1957, by Corbett H. Thigpen and Hervey M. Cleckley, and published by McGraw-Hill Book Co., Inc.)

So it was arranged for Bonnie to go and live with Mrs. White's mother and father, who still lived in the distant rural home where she herself had been born. Eve herself would find a job and work federal troops in the integration crisis continued to simmer and there were no signs here that Arkansas Gov. Orval Faubus will reach an agreement on the removal of the paratroopers and the deactivating of the National Guard.

Faubus has made no comment on the subject since Thursday when he said he "positively" would not surrender his "discretionary powers as governor."

Faubus has contended he used National Guard troops to maintain law and order at Central High and that to perform this task the guard had to keep the Negro students out of the school. This was within his discretion under the law, Faubus declared.

After Faubus bowed to a federal court injunction and removed the guard, the Negroes attended classes and mob violence broke out. Local police said they were unable to handle the mob." President Eisenhower ordered the Army to occupy the school on Sept. 24.

U.S. Rep. Brooks Hays of Little Rock, close friend of the President, predicted Friday that any use of federal troops to force integration in Georgia and other deep South states would lead to "disastrous results."

Hays, who three weeks ago arranged an Eisenhower-Faubus conference that produced no concrete results, said that because of the difficulty in the Little Rock case the federal government may adopt a more "flexible" approach to enforcement of court integration orders.

He said he fears disastrous results would erupt from any forcible integration in Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, South Carolina, Virginia and Florida.

then the case will be brought before the police committee for final action," Jenkins told the new board. "I am sure we will not . . . and I'm sure we will not . . . board."

"I am sure I can carry out your unanimous recommendations within the limits of the laws as they now exist."

Jenkins explained he could suspend an officer for five days or prefer charges to be brought before the committee. He said in future cases brought before the committee he would present a written report from the advisory board along with his findings.

Personnel files in the department will be made available to the board, Jenkins said. He added they will be provided with a filing system of their own for reference in making decisions on transfers and assignments.

Union Elects Hoffa, Spurns Cleanup corrupt and unfit to remain in organized labor.

Secretary of Labor Mitchell, in Chicago said Hoffa's election would almost certainly lead to "repressive" labor legislation in Congress.

AFL - CIO President George Meany, in Washington, declined to comment. A spokesman for the AFL-CIO said that he could only cite the federation's record of determination to clean corruption out of the labor movement. Meany declined to predict what the federation would do about the Teamsters. But it was clear that a rugged battle over the Teamsters status in the federation was shaping up between Hoffa and Meany.

SHOWDOWN EXPECTED

The first showdown on the ouster move is expected in three weeks when the AFL-CIO Executive Council meets to determine whether the Teamsters has rid its ranks of alleged corrupt elements.

Hoffa, in a fighting acceptance speech to the wildly applauding convention delegates, said the Teamsters want to remain in the AFL-CIO. He invited the federation to rescind its corruption findings against the Teamsters.

Hoffa said such unions as the miners, machinists and carpenters have from time to time left the parent labor body and managed to get along.

WILL GO IT ALONE

Saying the Teamsters will continue to live and grow whether in or out of the federation, Hoffa declared grimly: "If these people succeed in forcing the Teamsters out of the federation, and attempt to raid our organization, mark my words and mark them well, we will be ready to defend ourselves with every ounce of strength we possess."

McClellan's committee today subpoenaed all records of the Teamsters convention Credentials Committee and promised a probe of whether delegates had been chosen legally by their local unions.

McClellan had charged before the convention started that a large number of delegates were unqualified, but most of them were seated anyway at the convention.

A rank-and-file Teamsters member group, in Washington, said it planned to go ahead with litigation challenging the validity of delegates and hoped to have Hoffa unseated and the convention proceedings canceled.

Hoffa said in the early days of labor men like Samuel Gompers, Dan Tobin, William Green and Philip Murray were smeared and ridiculed, investigated and persecuted "yet they kept fighting."

"Were they destroyed?" Hoffa asked. "No. Did they stop?" "No. You men know my record. I have fought for what I believe is right and good against forces more vicious than any you can ever imagine. I propose to continue that fight as long as I live."

Hoffa said during 25 years in organized labor he had been beaten, threatened, abused and smeared but promised he would

"fight with every weapon at my command to protect the unity and strength of our union."

Calling on his political opponents at the convention to close ranks in the union, Hoffa said among all the charges against the Teamsters nobody ever had accused it of failing to organize and win labor contracts unmatched by other unions.

McClellan said Hoffa's election is a challenge to Congress to enact laws that will protect rank-and-file union members from "gangsterism and racketeer control."

In his acceptance speech, Hoffa lashed out at Meany and other AFL-CIO chiefs for cooperating with the McClellan committee and what Hoffa called "labor's legislative enemy."

Referring to Meany and AFL-CIO chiefs, Hoffa said, "They forget that tomorrow it will be their turn to face the enemy—I hope they are able to fight back."

12,000 Presbyterians Will Meet in Miami

By KAY McLEOD

A number of Atlanta Presbyterian men will leave early next week for Miami where they will take part in the Presbyterian Men's Convention opening Thursday.

Stated to be the largest gathering of men ever held by a Protestant denomination in this country, the meeting is expected to draw an attendance of 12,000.

Billy Graham will take part in the program and Vice President Nixon has tentatively accepted an invitation to speak on Thursday.

The theme of the meeting will be "All the Way for Christ" and various churchmen will speak on such topics as "In the Home," "With Money" and "On the Job."

Georgians taking part on the program will be Milton M. (Muggsy) Smith, Fulton County legislator; Dr. P. D. Miller, executive secretary of the denomination, and Gen. Joseph B. Fraser, retired of Hinesville, who will lead a discussion group.

Homecomings

Several churches in Atlanta will hold homecoming services this Sunday and other congregations will begin a week of revival.

Newton Estates Methodist Church begins a week of revival services to be led by Dr. A. W. Beasley, professor of homiletics at the Candler School of Theology.

Sunday also marks the church's eighth birthday and the completion of payment for the education building and will be Homecoming Day at the Church.

Dr. Thomas A. Fry Jr., pastor of the Druid Hills Presbyterian Church, will speak at the annual homecoming service of Rehoboth Presbyterian Church at 2 p.m. Sunday.

The Rev. Byron Kinnerly, pastor of the First Baptist Church at Toccoa, will lead a series of revival services at West Manor Baptist Church next week.

Dr. John Newport, professor of philosophy of religion at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, will lead the Harvest Revival at Hapeville First Baptist Church beginning Sunday.

The revival at Mt. Zion Methodist Church enters its second week Sunday. Outstanding Methodist speakers such as Mrs. Arthur J. Moore, Dr. Pierce Har- rison, Dr. Charles Allen and Bishop Moore will be heard during the week.

Golden Anniversaries
Gordon Street Baptist Church will mark its golden anniversary this Sunday.

A two-week program has been scheduled to celebrate the birthday. Dr. Pope Duncan, professor of church history at Southeastern Seminary, will speak at the 11 a.m. Sunday service and a pageant of the church's history will be presented at the evening service.

Dr. Searcy S. Garrison, executive secretary of the Georgia Baptist Convention, will lead a week of revival services beginning Oct. 13.

Founded on Oct. 13, 1907, the church had nine members and met at the corner of Moxley drive and Gordon road. It was then called the Battle Hill Baptist Church.

Today the church is located at the corner of Gordon street and Lucile avenue and has a membership of 1,370.

Dr. D. J. Evans has served as pastor of the church since 1946.

Other highlights of Golden Anniversary celebration will be a Tuesday night program featuring films of the church's history, a Wednesday night musical program and a Thursday night program highlighting education and evangelism.

Jacket Preaches

Rauey Mason, Georgia Tech tackle, will preach at the 11 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. service of the Sylvan Hills Baptist Church this Sunday.

Rauey, who recovered the fumble this past Saturday that prevented SMU from setting up a possible field goal near Tech's line in the third quarter, decided during the past summer to enter the ministry.

A sophomore at Tech, he plans to finish there and attend one of the Southern Baptist seminaries.

Communion Day
Sunday is Worldwide Communion Day.

Churches in Atlanta will join churches in more than 50 other countries in the breaking of the bread and drinking of the wine.

This is the tenth annual observance of the day which was begun in 1936 by a small group of ministers.

Sponsored by the National Council of Churches, the day is held as a "worldwide demonstration of Christian unity."

Methodist churches will take a special offering as part of the program of the day. Half of the offering will go for chaplains and religious activities at forts and army posts. The other half will buy food, clothing and shelter for the needy through the Methodist Committee for Overseas Relief.

Gets Unity Post
Winifred Wilkinson of the Unity Church here has been named leader of the Little Rock, Ark., Unity Center.

Miss Wilkinson is serving under special dispensation until she can complete the course of study necessary to lead a congregation.

She has had charge of the Sunday school of the local congregation since September, 1956, and has worked with the young people of the church.

New Minister
The Rev. Carl L. Cooper has accepted a call as minister of the Southeast Christian Church and will begin his work here this Sunday.

The Rev. Mr. Cooper, a native of Atlanta, comes here from Kingsport, Tenn. He has also served the South Gardens Christian Church in Savannah.

Beginning a week from Sunday he will lead a week-long revival at the church.

Leadership Training
The United Lutheran Churches of the Atlanta area will hold leadership workshop at Emanuel Lutheran Church this Sunday.

The Rev. William Wahl, secretary of the Board of Parish Education, Philadelphia, Pa., will lead the 3:30 p.m. workshop. Topic of discussion will be the expanding program of the church and increasing enrollments. The workshop is one of 10 being held in the Georgia-Alabama Synod.

Episcopal Course
A special course of instruction on the beliefs, traditions and practices of the Episcopal Church will be held at 5 p.m. each Sunday for the next three months beginning this week at the Episcopal Church of Our Saviour.

Bible Conference
The 14th annual Bible and Missionary Conference of the Colonial Hills Baptist Church will be held next week.

Speakers during the week include: Dr. Clyde Taylor, executive secretary of the National Association of Evangelicals; the Rev. Roy W. Gustafson, St. Petersburg, Fla.; the Rev. Russell

Dr. Clyde Taylor, Indianapolis, Ind.; evangelist M. A. McConne, Toledo, Ohio; the Rev. William H. Taylor of Guatemala, and Dr. Clarence W. Jones of Quito, Ecuador.

Sessions of the conference are scheduled for 10:30 a.m., 11:15 a.m., 7:30 p.m. and 8:15 p.m. daily.

A special afternoon rally will be held at 3 p.m. Sunday.

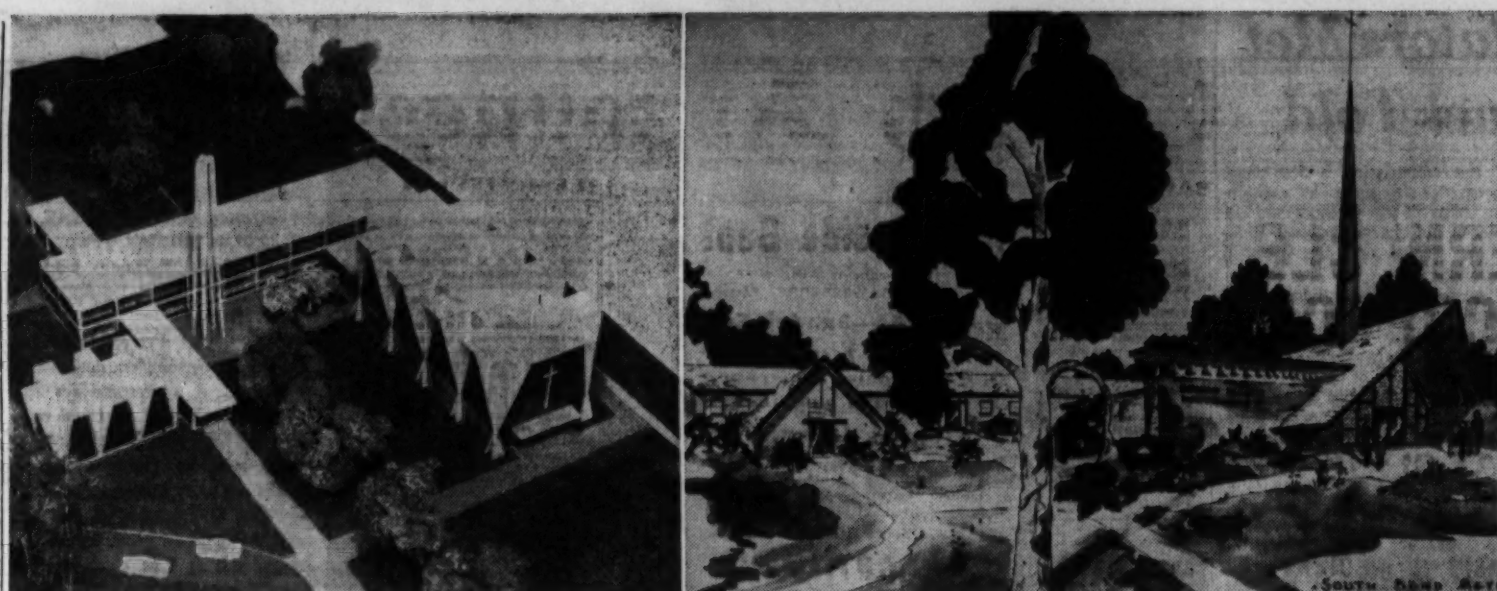

Churches Building Here 'Reach Up'
A church should point upward. Church builders have felt that way for a long time. In the old Gothic structures a bell tower reached into the heavens.

Later the traditionalist added the tall steeple which looked as if it were touching the sky.

And that is just the thought which the modernists are building into the churches today which are known as contemporary.

Two of Atlanta's new churches—one still on the drawing board and another with the first unit ready for dedication—will be "reaching upward" in building as well as mission.

When the people at Dogwood Hills decided they were ready to build a new church they called in

THESE ATLANTA CHURCHES CHOSE THAT MODERN LOOK: DOGWOOD HILLS BAPTIST (LEFT) AND SOUTH BEND METHODIST. Congregations Liked Low Cost, Unusual Materials, Large Expenses of Glass and Designs That Point Upward

2 Churches Building Here 'Reach Up'

Two young architects and told them approximately how much they wanted to spend and added, "Just use your own ideas."

As architects Ted Shirley and Ray Merritt explained, it was to be built of folded slab reinforced concrete with huge areas of plain glass in the educational building and delicately colored stained glass in the small chapel and 1,000-seat sanctuary.

The vertical thrust of folded slab vaults is brought to a visual climax in the bell-tower, which tapers from a square base to a cross at the top—pointing upward, explained the Rev. William Geren, pastor.

Then the congregation learned that the initial unit which would be the first and second stories of a three-floor educational building would cost them about $61,000 or about $8.56 per square foot. This was about 25 per cent cheaper than any other type of building, and that sold the congregation.

This Sunday the first unit, a 44 by 120-foot unit with a 44 by 40-foot fellowship hall—basement will be dedicated, and the congregation is looking forward to building the second unit in the near future.

Still on the drawing board is the South Bend Methodist Church's new building, designed by Cunningham and Barker.

It also looks upward. From the high arched ceiling of the sanctuary rises a steeple that reaches up to a tall, slender cross.

The educational building will be worth about $45,000 but all the people of the church are pooling their skills and plan to build this first unit for about $30,000 or $6.50 a square foot, an unheard of cost for any church, said the Rev. D. E. Morris, pastor.

The tall brick structure will have California redwood interior with an indoor garden. And as a finishing touch there will be a cherry red door at the front of the sanctuary, welcoming worshippers into a modern church.

Disagree But Work Together

QUESTION: Our church is planning a building program that I think is beyond our financial ability. My friends are enthusiastic. Should I stand in opposition and still work in the church or should I leave as a matter of conscience?

ANSWER:
As Christians we do not always find ourselves in total agreement in matters of policy. As long as there is no denial of the essentials of our faith, and as long as your friends do not cease to be your friends simply because you disagree, I would continue to work with them. There is no moral deviation here, but a matter of business judgment.

We need to be able to disagree in love and still work together to bring men to Jesus Christ. State your objections and then when and if you are outvoted, accept it graciously and continue to work with them as friends and as brothers and sisters in Christ. Time may indicate that you were wrong and not they. If so, still have your friends and your church.

Churchill Ends Farming Career, Sells Out at 82

LONDON, Oct. 4 (UP)—Sir Winston Churchill retired from another of his careers today—gentleman farmer.

The 82-year-old historian, author, bricklayer, painter, old soldier, sailor and former prime minister sold off the last of his farm equipment at auction on Chartwell Farm near Westerham, Kent.

"Christopher Mann, who bought the Chartwell and Bardogs farms from Sir Winston, bought most of the farm machinery.

THE WAY TO GOOD HEALTH: Sick of Being Sick?

"If I knew a way to get rid of this sickness that robs me of all my energy I would be the happiest man alive," said a man to his friend.

"Cheer up, my friend. I am not going to tell you HOW it may be done. I do not know HOW. I do not even know how to tell you. But I am going to take you to a Chiropractor. He deals with the CAUSE of your ailments instead of hunting for a remedy to suit your particular ailment."

And soon this man, too, was convinced that Life comes from the inside of a man. He found that human energy, like all other energies could be interfered with. When human energy leaves the brain in full force, something is bound to happen. Weakness, ailments, proneness to disease usually develop. Tiredness, sluggishness, inability to sleep and rest show up.

Chiropractic is the science which seeks out and adjusts the cause of human energy interference and loss. The achievements made to recovery in health and usefulness is revealing even to the skeptic, a new outlook on life.

See a G. C. A. Chiropractor for your needs.

The Same Script?

ANN ARBOR, Oct. 4—There's something about this tour with the Georgia Bulldogs which reminds me of a ride to Miami last fall. On the chartered plane to Florida, the players were grim and determined and dared to say they had a chance against the unbeaten Hurricane.

On Miami street corners and in the Beach hotel lobby, cocky Miami players pointed to Georgia players and said those boys are going to get chewed up Friday night. The Hurricane was ranked sixth in the nation and was looking ahead to an engagement with then undefeated TCU a week hence.

An exiled Georgian named Morris McLemore did more to fire up the Bulldogs than coaches could have in hours of inspirational lectures. The king-sized McLemore sat down at his typewriter and wrote, among other things, in his Daily News column, that "Miami has a turkey tonight in Georgia." The game appeared so unappealing that Mr. McLemore departed town to watch the Florida Gators.

Georgia went out and played a desperate brand of football. They led the stunned Hurricane for three quarters and finally walked off with a proud 7-7 draw. In a dismal 3-4-1 season, they enjoyed one shining hour.

They were laughing at Georgia in Ann Arbor Friday. Some wanted to know why Coach Bennie Oosterbaan wanted to schedule a practice game. Mighty Michigan, ranked No. 8 in the nation, was far more interested in next week's all-important engagement with Michigan State.

Once again the Georgia coaches had an assist from the press. This time, in the Detroit Free Press, the head over Hal Middleworth's story read: "Wolverines to Feast on Georgia." There were others, but that's the story the Bulldog players read on the plane. And again there were the grim faces.

Bulldogs May Repeat the Miami Shocker

This Georgia team is ready mentally to play a football game. Whether it is able physically remains to be seen. Frankly, I think the Bulldogs are going to do themselves proud.

Michigan's performance against Southern Cal last week proved the Bulldogs are meeting no super team. The Trojans, without a senior in the lineup, walked into the arena underdogs by three TDs, the same margin the odds-makers expect Georgia to bow. Michigan won, 16-6.

Perhaps I'll get an education Saturday, but I'm among those who think Big Ten football is vastly overrated. Certainly Georgia is no great team, but the Bulldogs have an opportunity to wipe out some bitter frustration in one afternoon.

Without benefit of bourbon or marijuana, here's a vote for Georgia to stage one of the most shocking upsets of this or any other season. This may be the most inaccurate forecast since the late Carter Latimer selected Furman the day that Georgia won, 70-7. But I selected Georgia to beat Miami last year, and thus far the script has been the same.

With Georgia Tech idle and Georgia in Ann Arbor, Peach Staters will focus their attention on the World and Dixie Series Saturday. But there are a couple of games on tap which will have important bearing on the SEC race.

Miss. State, our choice for the crown, goes against Tennessee in Knoxville in the big one. Wade Walker has been pointing for this game since the Maroons assembled for practice. He overlooked Memphis State and almost got outpointed last Saturday before squeaking out a 10-6 decision.

Tennessee, derailed by Auburn last week, will be a hard-smacking outfit on the rebound. The Vols seldom lose twice in a row in Knoxville. But they lost their last two wrangles with State there. Here's a ballot for Billy Stacy and crew in a bruising offensive duel. The Vols are a TD favorite, the margin by which the Maroons probably will win.

Wildcats Have Never Lost to Gators at Home

Florida, the conference darkhorse, will take off the wraps against Kentucky in Lexington. Blanton Collier's highly heralded band of sophomores disappointed against Tech and Mississippi. They'll have to show vast improvement against the Gators or lose their first three games for the first time in 61 years.

Florida socked a weak Wake Forest team, 27-0, in a mud brawl in Gainesville last Saturday. The Gator defense stole the spotlight, blocking two punts and recovering six Deacon bobbles. Linemen scored twice. That's more than the Gator backs are likely to do against Kentucky. The Wildcats have never lost to Florida in Stoll Field, and they're apt to keep intact this record. The nod to Kentucky by a slim margin.

Only other conference game sends victory-starved Alabama against Vanderbilt in Nashville. There's no love between this pair, since Vandy quarterback Don Orr suffered a broken jaw last year. The Commodores won, 32-7, and should repeat by at least two TDs. Auburn will celebrate its Tennessee triumph by popping little Chattanooga. Fifty high school teams and 20 bands will look on as guests. They'll see the Plainsmen win by whatever margin Coach Ralph Jordan desires.

In other games involving conference members, LSU should whip Texas Tech; Mississippi will outscore Hardin-Simmons and Tulane figures to score what may be its lone victory of the year over Marquette. Even if the Greenies lose, this trip to Milwaukee should be a treat, for they'll get a look at the World Series.

The others: N.C. State over Missouri, Illinois over Colgate, Iowa over Wash. State, Navy over North Carolina, Baylor over Miami, Ohio State over Washington, Oregon State over Northwestern, Rice over Stanford, South Carolina over Texas.

West Virginia over Wisconsin, Columbia over Princeton, Cornell over Harvard, Army over Penn State, Yale over Brown, Penn over Dartmouth, Syracuse over Boston U., Houston over Cincinnati, Kansas over Colorado, Notre Dame over Indiana.

Kansas State over Nebraska, Oklahoma over Iowa State, Oklahoma State over Wichita, Minnesota over Purdue, Duke over Maryland, Virginia over Wake Forest, VPI over Wake Forest, Arkansas over TCU, Utah over Idaho, UCLA over Oregon, Wyoming over Utah State. (Season's record: 39-12-4.)

FLU MAIN OPPONENT

Nation's Top Ten Face Easy Sledding Today

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP)—College football's titans, led by mighty Oklahoma, should mow down the opposition Saturday.

Unless the flu bug bites hard, the top ten ranking teams appear to have a picnic with the possible exception of Iowa's defending Big Ten Conference champions.

On form and manpower and home field, the Hawkeyes (1-0) figure to have too much of everything for the Washington State Cougars (2-0) from the Pacific Coast Conference. But Iowa's deep squad has been hurt by the flu and that could be the lever.

The Hawkeyes walloped Utah State 70-14 in their opener. Washington State, however, displayed possibilities in beating Nebraska 34-12 and California 13-7.

Oklahoma (No. 1), Michigan State (2), Minnesota (3), Duke (4), Texas A&M (5), Navy (6), Auburn (7), Oregon State (9) and Michigan (10) all are heavy favorites.

The Sooners (1-0) from Oklahoma, also weakened by flu, had two weeks to prepare for Iowa

Bufs Chill Crackers, 4-1

Chittum, Clark Yield 7 Hits
To Even Dixie Series, 2-2

By AL THOMY

Right-handers, who usually get an early bath at Ponce de Leon Park, wrapped a seven-hit, 4-1, defeat around the Atlanta Crackers Friday night on a cold evening in which only 611 spectators left the home fires.

The old-timers couldn't remember when a Cracker game last attracted only 611 paid admissions, nor could some of the youngsters recall when a pair of right-handers last silenced Atlanta as Houston's Nelson Chittum and Phil Clark did with an assortment of pitches.

Chittum, not especially known for his speed, must have preferred the cool weather, for he had a no-hitter for three and a third rounds before Billy Reynolds slammed single to right.

He weakened somewhat in the fifth when Sammy Taylor and Frank DiPrima singled, and finally was kayoed in the sixth when the Crackers pushed over their only run. Only manager Harry Walker's spectacular, fence-crawling catch of Buck Riddle's high drive to left prevented further damage in the inning. Clark, the Albany native, came on to strike out pinch-hitter Bob Montag and prevent further damage.

Chittum, a 16-12 operator during the regular season, struck out nine, Clark three, as the Crackers had one of their poorer nights at the plate.

Lanky Jerry Nelson was the starting and losing pitcher. He was reached for three of the four Houston runs. Lefty Bob Hartman and Paul Cave, the relief experts, finished up without appreciable damage. Hartman was especially impressive, recording six whiffs in his short tour of duty.

The Bufs, now deadlocked 2-2 with the Crackers in the Dixie Series, pecked away successfully at Nelson, starting with the first round when Herbie Adams got a free pass and scored on Benny Valenzuela's two-base smash to left.

They picked up another in the second on some delayed infield play by the Crackers. Catcher Nels Burbrink, on with the first of four singles, advanced to second on Nelson's error, and came all the way home after DiPrima threw out Ruben Amaro, and tried to get another at second. Seeing Burbrink break for home, DiPrima rifled to catcher Sammy Taylor, who missed the elusive Burbrink.

The Buf catcher singled home the third run in the third after Hartman took over for Nelson, and Cave was the victim of the fourth run in the seventh. Walker and Burbrink wired together singles, with Tony Stathos running for the skipper who pulled a muscle at second base. Clark's fly to center pushed in Stathos for the final score of the game.

The Crackers missed their candy in the sixth. With Sammy Meeks aboard with a hit, Riddle lifted a high floater to the 350-sign in left. Walker backed up, leaped and came down with the ball if not all his clothes. Dick Phillips and Taylor followed with hits for a run, but Montag fanned for the third out.

Taylor had two of the Cracker seven knocks.

Walker reported his leg may prevent him from playing on Saturday.

In the fifth game on Saturday at Poncey, Ken MacKenzie, victor

Series, Football Head TV, Radio Fare Today

WSB-TV carries a baseball-football doubleheader Saturday, and Radio Station WAGA goes in for a football twin bill to feature the Atlanta area weekend TV and radio sports dialing.

The World Series, from Milwaukee's County Stadium, will be a 1:45 presentation. And immediately following will come the Michigan State-California intersectional affair from Berkeley, Calif. Radio station WSB, incidentally, will handle the Series.

WAGA's radio grid bill is an all-Southeastern Conference thing. The matinee feature is Mississippi State at Tennessee, from Knoxville, Tenn., at 1:45 p.m. And in the evening, it's Alabama vs. Vanderbilt from Nashville, Tenn., with a 9 p.m. kickoff.

The University of Georgia's battle with Michigan, usually a WSB-Radio exclusive, will be heard at 1:15 p.m. over WGST Radio.

Riled Bulldogs Smell Upset at Ann Arbor

Michigan Headlines Ridicule Georgia
As 'No Match,' 'Southeastern Dwarf'

By JESSE OUTLAR

Constitution Sports Editor

ANN ARBOR, Oct. 4—A partisan jury of some 80,000 fans convenes here Saturday for one of the infrequent trials in the oft-argued case of SEC vs. Big Ten football.

Sun is forecast for this intersectional tussle, with the temperature around 65. No rain has fallen here this week, so a dry track seems assured. After arrival Friday afternoon the Bulldogs worked out in bright sunshine for the first time this week.

Most of the experts, illegal and otherwise, insist the affair should be ruled a mistrial and already have rendered a unanimous verdict in favor of Michigan over Georgia. To be specific, the bookies say the Wolverines will win by 21 points.

The Georgia dressing room is about the only spot where you'll hear many dissenting opinions. The band of Bulldogs are riled and determined to present some new evidence in their behalf.

They insist they are a much better team than they showed in the 26-7 loss to Texas and the 9-6 defeat by Vandy. Coach Wallace Butts won't have to get his men "up" for the game. The Midwest press took care of that with such headlines as "Wolverines to Feast on Georgia," "Thin Bulldogs No Match for Big M."

"Big Ten Giants Meet SEC Dwarfs."

On the basis of past performances, there's every reason to believe that the Bulldogs have more ambition than offensive muscles. Over a two-year span, they have netted a mere 13 points in rolling up a five-game losing streak.

They've certainly given no indication that they're capable of knocking off a team advertised as one of the best in the Midwest and ranked No. 8 in the nation.

A strong psychological edge appears to be Georgia's only advantage. While the Bulldogs are looking at the headlines with fire in their eyes, Michigan may be looking ahead to next week's date with Michigan State.

Coach Bennie Oosterbaan appears to be the only man worried about the Bulldogs. Needless to say, Coach Butts is plenty concerned about the power-packed Wolverines.

Butts is afraid that Michigan will play the type of game it failed to play on the Coast last week.

While Georgia has been disappointing, Michigan mystified supporters with an indifferent performance in squeezing past seniorless Southern Cal, 16-6. The inept Trojans, soundly thrashed by Oregon State, 20-0, the previous week, netted 113 yards rushing, compared to 191 for Michigan. The Wolverines were penalized 125 yards and Cal 115 in what observers termed a "sloppy" football game.

Whether they'll run against Georgia remains to be seen, but Michigan has the horses. John Herrsten, a bruising 212-pound fullback, is the trigger man of

Yank Odds Drop, But They're Still Favored in No. 3 Today

Turley, Buhl Are Moundsmen;
Other Lineup Changes Likely

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 4 (AP)—Bob Turley and Bob Buhl, a pair of bullet-throwing right-handers, will do the honors tomorrow when the World Series switches to this baseball-daffy city after a one-day travel break.

All even at one game each after holding the proud New York Yankees to a split in their own stadium, the confident Milwaukee Braves return to their friendly "Home of the Braves" for three big games.

In sharp contrast to base New York where a World Series is something that happens every October at Yankee Stadium, there is contagious excitement in the brisk air of Wisconsin. The beer and cheese land never has hosted a series before and there is intense civic pride in "our Braves."

Huge crowds cheered the Braves last night when they flew home on a pink cloud. Lew Burdette's pitching and Wes Covington's hitting and fielding blended into a heady tonic. The 4-2 victory that squared the Series came at the most opportune moment.

The Yankees, who seldom fly, rode into Milwaukee at noon on a special train and hustled to County Stadium for a workout. Only a few of the Yanks—Whitey Ford, Mickey Mantle and Yogi Berra—had played in the park in the 1955 All-Star game. Tony Kubek, a Milwaukee boy knew the park but to the others this symmetrical stadium was a strange new land.

Milwaukee's second game victory sliced the Series odds in half. The Yankees, who were 13 to 5 favorites after the opener, now were only 7 to 5 to cop the best-of-7 set. For tomorrow's game, the price was 11 to 10, New York favored.

About 45,000, including standees, will jam into County Stadium but their decibel count probably will double or triple the noise generated by 69,000 in New York. If the series stretches out to the full seven games, new attendance records may be set.

The fast ball hitters on both clubs—who have been moaning about the curves and changing speeds of Warren Spahn, Whitey Ford and Burdette—will get a chance to swing from their heels. Both Turley, who follows Don Larsen's no-windup delivery, and Buhl come from the old "rear back and fire" school.

Covington, whose eye-opening catch on Bobby Shantz' fly helped save yesterday's game, was the big batting hero of the first two games with his .500 average. This unsung left fielder who was farmed out to Wichita in May and brought back to replace Bobby Thomson after the Red Schoendienst deal with New York, has overshadowed such sluggers as Eddie Mathews, Hank Aaron and Joe Adcock. In fact, Mathews still was hitless in six trips.

"Look out for Mathews," said Manager Fred Haney. "When he starts to hit, we're going to be tough."

Haney said he would move Covington up to the No. 5 spot in the batting order and would play Bob "Hurricane" Hazle, a late season phenom from Wichita, in place of Andy Pafko in right field. Hazle would bat 7th. He usually platoons Pafko and Hazle, depending on the pitching, and Turley will be the Yanks' first righthanded starter.

THE MANTLE REPORT

SERIES FOES AWAIT BLASTS
BY GUNNERS BERRA, MATHEWS

By MICKEY MANTLE

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 4.—We Yankees now believe this World Series will be a tough one such as we always played with the Dodgers, because we failed to keep on top of the Braves when we had them down. We had the momentum after winning the first game, but threw it away.

The one bright idea we had on our day off was that Yogi Berra was bound to break loose at the plate, as he always does, and be the main fellow in our attack. We also figured that Ed Mathews of the Braves was too solid a hitter to continue to be shut out. Those two important left-handed hitters were kept under control in the first two games, and that's not natural.

Sometimes an outstanding star will have a weak Series. Gil Hodges amazed me in my first World Series in 1952. I knew about Gil—he had even hit four homers in a game. However, in that Series he was in such a slump that he could hardly reach me with a fly ball. I got back my respect for Hodges in '53 and kept it, because in that Series he was clouting everything our pitchers threw.

Most of the Yankees are on their first trip here, and they wondered why the Braves' park wasn't known as more of a hitting field, considering that the longest distance to center is only 402 feet. The park is smaller than Yankee Stadium and it gives the right-handers much more of a chance than they have back in New York.

You can tell about a park only in competition, not in practice, but from my limited experience here in one All-Star game, I knew it takes a good healthy blow to put one over the fence, no matter how close it seems. Maybe that is because the field is wide open to the wind in the outfield. The background is not too favorable for a hitter in the daytime either, even though they have planted trees beyond center field.

The main reason for hitters having trouble anywhere, though, is pitching. The Braves have good pitching, although I couldn't say Warren Spahn or Lew Burdette was as tough as Dick Donovan of the White Sox. To me he is the hardest pitcher to hit in the American League. I never did mind hitting against Billy Pierce, but Donovan is a problem.

The Braves, incidentally, may be a team like the White Sox. One that is hard to shake off. Nothing surprised me more than the way the White Sox bounced back after we beat them three straight in Chicago. That would have disheartened any team, but when they came into New York on their last trip they could have jumped into the race if they beat us twice. They don't give up easily; the Braves may be as hard to convince that our pitching will win the Series.

We do not believe that the Braves have any advantage over us in their own park, as the Dodgers might have had with all their right-handed power hitters in Ebbets Field. Even so, the park doesn't matter so much as the pitchers. Two years ago the Dodgers won the Series in our park, and last year we won it in Ebbets Field.

We were glad to see Tony Kubek get a couple of hits. He is the best rookie I ever saw and everybody else agrees. He acted like a 10-year man during the season, but we figured he needed a hit to give him confidence in the Series.

A number of people have asked me why I bunted, and why Mathews bunted in this Series. Their idea was that with our power we should gun for the home run. I bunted even with two strikes, because I was up first and if I got to base we might add an insurance run. I have gotten away with such bunts because they come by surprise.

Mathews tried a smart play, in my book, against Whitey Ford. He was first up against a left-hander who wasn't even letting the Braves right-handers hit very much. He would have been foolish to swing away, instead of trying to get on first to open the inning.

The one Braves' pitcher who surprised me was Don McMahon. If he wants a testimonial that he is fast, he can have it from us. The only good thing about seeing him again is that it will mean we knocked out their starter.

Over Henry

Special to The Constitution
McDONOUGH, Oct. 4.—Half-back Donald Cook scored four touchdowns as Forest Park's unbeaten football team romped to an easy 48-0 Region 3-A game here Friday night.

Cook's touchdowns were scored on runs of 51, 16, 12 and four yards. Donald Fincher, Jerry Benefield and Johnny Formby scored the others, all on runs. Fincher's was for 36 yards, Benefield's for 45 and Formby's for three.

Cook also scored two of the six extra points, both on runs. Three others were scored by Norman Hale and one by Edward Loving, also on runs.

Henry County penetrated to the Forest Park 12 with a long pass play on the last play of the game, but otherwise never threatened to score.

Tackle Larry Foster, end Barry Billington and halfback Wayne Smith stood out defensively for Forest Park.

Forest Park scores: TD—Cook, 4 (51 run); TD—Fincher, 36 (run); TD—Benefield, 45 (run); TD—Formby, 3 (run); PAT—Hale, 3 (runs); Cook, 2 (runs); Loving (run).

Ex-Sub Carries 12 for 175,
As Unbeaten Griffin Falls

By JIM CARSON

GRiffin, Oct. 4.—Gordon Cranford, a 162-pound junior halfback making his first varsity start, reeled off touchdowns runs of 60 and 71 yards here Friday night to reward Charley Hall's Decatur Bulldogs with a 12-0 victory over previously unbeaten Griffin.

The Griffin setback placed Southwest DeKalb in the driver's seat of the Region 4-AAA South race and set the stage for a showdown battle between the Eagles and DeKalb in Atlanta Oct. 25.

Cranford, a speedster who does a 10 flat 100 in a track outfit, got away on his 60-yard jaunt with 2:54 gone in the second quarter. He took a pitchout from quarterback Chuck Reiley, cut outside and into the secondary and shook off at least three tacklers before cutting back across the field and outrunning the Griffin secondary.

A 15-yard holding penalty, first of five against Decatur, cost Mike Chandler, his perfect placement for point and on the second try a Reiley pass fell incomplete.

Griffin stormed back on the next kickoff and marched from its own 32 to the Decatur six, but a fourth-down pass by quarterback Gene Lewis was knocked down by Candler Brown.

The Bulldogs kept Griffin in the hole most of the third period and early in the fourth an Eagle punt to Decatur at the Decatur 27 set the stage for Cranford.

A play later, the 16-year-old Cranford, who was a B-leader most of last season, zipped over his left guard and through the middle of the Griffin secondary 71 yards to score. Again a 15-yard penalty cost the Bulldogs' Chandler his perfect placement and on the second try Bill Womack was short of the point on a delayed back.

Though Reiley is due his share of honors for his offensive work, statistics ruled Cranford king of this contest. He ran the ball 12 times for 175 yards and then was only 69 yards short of that mustered by the Bulldogs.

Junior quarterback Billy Shirah took command of the Eagles midway of the fourth quarter, and with aid of a two-hand overhead forward pass 16 yards to Tommy Gregory, had a first down at the Decatur 12. A 15-yard penalty set the Eagles back, however, and a play later halfback Johnny Lindsey fumbled on a double reverse and Jeff Travis recovered at the 28 for Decatur.

Hall singled out tackles Tom Hay and Pat Case and end Alton Crum for their defensive work but in his victory hour said:

"They were all great."
The defeat leaves only SW DeKalb unbeaten in Region 4-AAA South.

Biddies, Jackets
To Play Monday
At Grant Field

The Georgia Tech-South Carolina freshmen footballers, originally scheduled to play Friday, then postponed until Saturday, are now booked for 8 p.m. Monday at Grant Field.

First two postponements came about when Georgia Tech officials decided against playing on rain-soaked Grant Field. The field would have been chopped up to such an extent that it probably couldn't have been put in shape for the next varsity game here with Auburn Oct. 19.

The contest will be first of three for coach Charlie Tate's Baby Jackets and the second for Billy Henderson's Biddies. The latter defeated Wake Forest, 18-0, last Friday.

Rose Bowl Field was too wet for use again Friday so the Jacket varsity worked in the old gym, while the freshmen drilled in the Big Dome. The varsity has worked only 15 minutes outdoors since the SMU game.

14-0 Region Win

By DON BAIRD

GAINESVILLE, Oct. 4.—A stubborn Gainesville defense, which deflated Bobby Cleveland's spectacular passing show in the situations, brought the Red Elephants a 14-0 victory over visiting Westminster in a rainy mist here Friday night.

Gainesville took advantage of two Westminster mistakes to run up an 8-0 lead, then drove 39 yards for an insurance score in the final quarter to take its second straight Region 4-AA East victory.

Gainesville scored first in the second quarter on a 43-yard march, set up when a poor Westminster punt carried only 15 yards. Thereon Brown and A. D. Watson alternated carries to move the ball to the Westminster 16 and Billy Lothridge hit end Bobby Lothridge with a 14-yard jump pass to move it to the two. Billy Lothridge sneaked over for the six-point.

The Red Elephants went into business again in the final quarter when Richard Shaw intercepted Cleveland's pass at the Westminster 27 and returned to the 19. A 10-yard run by Dennis Griffin led the march to the two but Gainesville lost the ball on a fumble. Tackle Jack Bell nailed a Wildcat runner in the end zone for two points, however.

American, European Sports Cars Duel
In Two-Day Show Which Starts Today

Special to The Constitution
GAINESVILLE, Oct. 4.—More than 50 of racing's "amateurs," members of the sports car set, begin Gainesville's semi-annual Enoche here Saturday at Gainesville Airport.

The two-day program of sports car races features a novice event and inspection of cars Saturday in preparation for Sunday's five-race program.

At least a dozen makes of cars will be on hand for the show, including drivers from throughout the Southeast. Most of the cars are regular sports cars which the owners use for every day transportation.

Also present, however, will be some of the European sports cars especially designed for racing. Among the top entries will be D-Jaguars, Ferraris and Maseratis.

The race is sponsored by the Atlanta Sports Car Club and at least 15 members of the Atlanta group will be competing in Sunday's program.

Among the highly regarded drivers will be Joe Sheppard, who won a spring race here in a Lotus, driving a Maserati; Walt Cline of Chattanooga in a Corvette; Dr. Harry Rollings of Savannah in a D-Jaguar and Bill Burroughs of Atlanta, driving an A. C. Bristol which won a class race at Watkins Glen, N.Y., recently.

Sunday's program will begin at 1 p.m. with races divided according to classes and concludes with a final 90-lap feature open to all classes. The course is a three-mile, winding asphalt strip with 10 curves.

CASEY'S WIFE 'MILKS'
CHEERS, YANKS BALK

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 4.—Mrs. Casey Stengel took a turn at milking a cow as the New York Yankees arrived in Wisconsin today, but the players ignored a welcoming ceremony here and a spokesman said, "This is strictly bush league."

At Sturtevant, near Burlington where the Yankees have established headquarters at a resort, about 2,000 persons were at the depot, including village president Abe Kirkorian. There was also a little league baseball team with "Yankees" emblazoned on their uniforms.

The crowd swirled past police as the train stopped, but the Yankees didn't appear, only a spokesman who shouted, "Only wives and officials getting off here. The players are going on to Milwaukee."

"Come on, send out a couple of players," shouted a man wearing a Kiwanis pin.

"Can't," a representative said. "They got batting practice in Milwaukee."

"Well I hope you lose—and you're going to."

It was at this point that Mrs. Stengel, wife of the New York manager, took a hand as she was confronted by Rosie, a Guernsey owned by Adolph Kutzner.

Dressed in a fur cape and pert bonnet, Mrs. Stengel took her place on a milking stool, labored a moment and then announced:

"Someone milked this cow before I did." Then she up-ended the empty bucket and said, "There's a job well done."

She got a big hand.

Underdog Georgia Guns
For Upset Over Michigan

Lewis should start doing some of the things which earned them rave notices as prep stars.

Return to action of Capt. J. B. Davis, a terrific punt returner, will aid the Georgia offense. Either Davis or Carl Manning will get the call at left half, Jimmy Orr, the star of the backfield show thus far, will be at right half, and Theron Sapp at fullback. Sapp earned his spurs last week by hacking out 96 muddy yards in 15 smacks.

Up front Riley Gunnels moves back into the starting berth at left tackle. Nat Dye, a pleasant surprise, will be on the opposite side. Quinton Smith and Jimmy Vickers man the flanks, with Al Bishop and Mike Anderson at guard and Dave Lloyd at center.

Georgia looked sharper this week in drills than at any time this fall. But the Bulldogs haven't looked at a team like Michigan this season.

OFF-SIZE SHELLS CAN EXPLODE GUN BARREL IN HUNTER'S FACE

By CHARLES ELLIOTT

At least a dozen of us were hidden around the small dove field and the action was going at a lively clip. Doves poured in from the swamp and a nearby pine forest and the popping guns sounded like a Fourth of July celebration. I was as busy as a one-footed hound dog trying to hold down a coon, but at the same time subconsciously attempting to make a mental note of who was stationed where, by the caliber of guns. A 20-gauge does not roll or echo like a 12.

One gun puzzled me. It thundered like the old 8-gauge I used to shoot in the black powder days. It always kicked me down and I'd have to scramble to my feet and run around the cloud of smoke to see if I'd hit anything. It was a hollow, booming noise, so when I finally collected my limit of doves, I broke down my gun and walked into the little valley on my right, to see who was shooting what.

I found an irritated hunter. He was scuffling with his shotgun and muttering words forbidden by the postal authorities. I asked him what the matter was and he shoved the gun into my hands. A hull was jammed in its barrel.

"This is the most stupid thing I ever saw," he swore. "I came off this morning with a hunting jacket full of 16-gauge shells for this 12-gauge gun. I've been shooting the 16s in it, but they swell up so tight that I have to dig out the hulls with my knife."

I fought back an inclination to get into the nearest foxhole with the foxes, and told him he was the luckiest man on the field. Any one of those off-size shells could have blown the breech apart like a stick of dynamite and him with it.

I took up all his 16s and gave him the remainder of my 12-gauge shells, so he could finish out the shoot with some degree of safety.

A couple of seasons ago, on the first shot I made at a dove, the end of my gun barrel was shredded. I was about 90 per cent sure that I had looked through the barrel as I always do before I put in the first shell on every hunt, but not all the way sure. Anything that blocks that exit hole in your gun, from a flimsy strip of cloth to a skin of mud, is apt to peel the barrel right back in your face when you pull the trigger. Even if it doesn't turn out to be a fatal experience, it's certainly a frightening one. I showed the barrel to several friends who are experts in the gun business, and the consensus was that I had probably been shooting old shells and a wad of them fused together, causing the barrel to disintegrate. But the experts didn't give me absolute clearance and I'll always have a little doubt as to whether I was to blame for the near accident.

On a big game hunt I'm a bit fanatic about the end of my rifle barrel. It can touch a snow bank and get clogged with ice. It is possible for snow off the limb of a tree to fill the first half inch of the muzzle and turn to hard crystals. When I am intent on the stalk, I know that it's possible to run a stick into the end of the barrel or touch it into the dirt without realizing it. If there is any doubt at all, I take out the shell and look through the barrel. So far—and I'll knock on walnut—I've never had a bolt kicked back in my teeth. I hope I never have.

Each year a few guys have rifle or shotgun blow up in their hands. Some of these accidents cause painful or serious injury. It's far from being the most pleasant experience I can imagine to have that tremendous explosion of energy and lethal lead leave a gun barrel by any other route than the proper exit put there by the manufacturer.

SW DeKalb Beats Russell, Tops Loop Heroics of Norwood, Costen Net 18-7 Victory in Mud

By CHARLIE ROBERTS

The ground gained by Tommy Norwood and James Costen Friday night wouldn't be enough for Aunt Minnie to plant a row of beans on. But it was enough to give Southwest DeKalb a comfortable 18-7 football victory over the Russell Wildcats in East Point mud.

That's the kind of guys quarterback Costen and halfback Norwood are. They "can't do anything but beat you."

And the victory they netted the invading Panthers, coupled with left Coach Wayne Renegar's winners squarely on top of the Region 4-AAA South standings—the only team undefeated in sub-region play.

Norwood and Costen netted only 17 yards apiece from scrimmage but many "hidden yards," yards the statistics do not show, were accounted for by this clutch-happy pair of seniors who have never been grid regulars before this season.

For instance, the third and clinching touchdown midway the fourth quarter was an all Costen-Norwood production. Costen fired a long bullet pass to Norwood at the enemy 35. Little Norwood jerked away from one tackler at the point of pass-contact, another 15 yards before paydirt was reached on a scintillating play that covered 66 yards.

It was late in the second quarter when Norwood's 27-yard punt return and a 15-yard penalty put Southwest DeKalb 49 yards from goal. The Panthers made it on 11 running plays and two Costen-to-Tommy Neal passes of nine and five yards. Twice Norwood kept the drive alive with nine and five-yard runs. Bert Westbrook and Cleve Shupe contributed 16 ground yards, and Costen sneaked three times to get the final five 28 seconds before halftime.

Norwood virtually set up a second TD early in the third stanza with a 43-yard punt that rolled dead on the Russell three. Tackle Charlie Dickinson coiled around a fumble two plays later at the Russell seven, and Westbrook swept end for the whole works on the next play for a 12-0 lead.

Russell scored late in the fourth period as Dennis McDuffie hauled a punt back 16 yards, Larry Parker hit Don Halcome and McDuffie with twin seven-yard bullets, Robert Jennings raced for 7 and 19 yards and Marlin Morris sneaked the final two yards. Jimmy Bonner booted the conversion point.

Shupe, who galloped 54 yards to the Russell 15 early in the first quarter, was the Panthers' big gainer. He had 89 yards on eight carries. McDuffie swept 62 on six lugs and Bonner 48 on nine for Russell.

But with linemen Wilburn Lindsey, Martis Kent, Richard Allen, Dickinson, Tommy Bickley and Bobby Gools dedicated to victory and Norwood and Costen supplying the clutch work.

quarter. Harold Arwood got nine, then Larkowitz took over and reeled off three yards and then two for the tally. He also added the extra point.

Grady's second touchdown was set up after Rome got off a bad kick that traveled only three yards to their own 43. Three plays later Larkowitz found his favorite opening and romped 40 yards. Arwood added the extra point.

Rome came close in the fourth as they advanced to the Grady 28 only to have a pass intercepted by 31 seconds left. Leading the Rome defense were linebacker Pat Moss and end Hunter Bradley. Bulwarking the Grady defense which allowed the home-towners only four first downs and a total of 90 yards rushing and passing were tackle E. O. Hilderbrand and co-captain Kimbrough Davis.

Brown's TD Tames Tough Fulton, 7-0

N. Fultons Travel 341 Yards But Hit Goal-Line Barrier

By RED MULLINS

North Fulton High's Bulldogs scored a first-quarter touchdown against Fulton's upset-bent Redbirds at Grady Stadium Friday night, then spent the rest of the evening trying to duplicate the feat. They never did, though, settling for a hard-earned 7-0 decision.

Coach Frank Jernigan's Bulldogs scored the first time they had the ball. The 14-play, 57-yard scoring drive was climaxed when Harry Brown scored from the two on a plunge.

Woody Woodall, a 170-pound do-everything quarterback, teamed with Brown and halfback Tom Garden in rolling up an amazing 341 yards. Woodall completed 8 of 15 passes for 135 yards and the land troops rolled up 206 yards. But the Bulldogs were unable to come up with another score.

This was the second shutout for the rawhide-tough and alert North Fulton defense, anchored by Hill Huffman, Bob Long, Herb Nelson and Jay McClellan. The Redbirds did not get a first down until midway of the third period, so completely did the Bulldogs contain Fulton's running game.

Yards	First Downs	Yards Rushing	Yards Passing	Yards Penalties

In the third stanza the Bulldogs began to roll. Woodall shot a 29-yard strike to Garden, who was bumped out of bounds on the Redbird 12 by Jerry Whitmore, the only man who could catch the swift. Two fifteen-yard penalties halted the Bulldog drive and Woodall punted into the end zone.

Coach Bill Chonko's Redbirds then made their deepest penetration of the night. With Eric Edge, Claud Wood and Whitmore doing most of the lugging the Redbirds drove to the North Fulton 48. The drive fizzled there, however, and Whitmore was forced to punt.

For Fulton this was a moral victory, as the Redbirds held the highly regarded Buckhead express to a mere seven points. Defensive standouts were numerous for the Redbirds. Tony Allen, Jerry Kemp, Ken Buckalew, Bill Baughman and Whitmore usually managed to be at the right spots at the right time.

By five backs—including, ironically, one named Ringgold Davis, who formerly played for Ringgold. Fullback Jim Gray was the only one to score more than one, however.

Frank Sammons began the scoring with a 22-yard run in the first quarter and D. A. O'Neal ended it in the fourth with a 38-yard dash. Sandwiched in between were Gray's two touchdown trips of five and 30 yards. Davis' scoring sprint by H. D. Colley, Cliff McCaughey ran for the only extra point scored.

Only once did the visitors cross midfield, so tough was the Cadet defense. Halfback Doc Cain got to the GMA 48 in the final quarter, but the drive died there. Frequent fumbles was one reason for Ringgold's lack of success offensively.

GMA Blasts Ringgold For 38-0 Win

By CLIFF CALDWELL

Georgia Military Academy's powerful Cadets held Ringgold's Tigers at bay for four quarters in romping to an easy 38-0 victory over Ringgold's Tigers at College Park Friday night.

GMA touchdowns were scored by five backs—including, ironically, one named Ringgold Davis, who formerly played for Ringgold. Fullback Jim Gray was the only one to score more than one, however.

Frank Sammons began the scoring with a 22-yard run in the first quarter and D. A. O'Neal ended it in the fourth with a 38-yard dash. Sandwiched in between were Gray's two touchdown trips of five and 30 yards. Davis' scoring sprint by H. D. Colley, Cliff McCaughey ran for the only extra point scored.

Only once did the visitors cross midfield, so tough was the Cadet defense. Halfback Doc Cain got to the GMA 48 in the final quarter, but the drive died there. Frequent fumbles was one reason for Ringgold's lack of success offensively.

Berry Schools Mark Birthday of Founder

The 91st anniversary of the birth of the late Martha Berry, founder and builder of the famous Berry Schools near Rome, is Monday.

4 More Wait Trial In Lottery

By GENE BRITTON

Government attorneys pointed out Friday a second phase of the Horace Ingram lottery conspiracy case still remains to be fought out in federal court.

Ingram and nine others were convicted here Thursday. Eleven others named in the federal indictment were acquitted. During the trial, the court directed verdicts of acquittal for five others, and the government dropped its prosecution against one additional defendant.

INGRAM LINK CHARGED

Four defendants named in the indictment still are to be brought to trial. They are charged with conspiring with Ingram and the others to defeat internal revenue laws on gambling.

Former Sheriff Hill Tallent of Forsyth County is accused of destroying certain items of evidence in connection with a 1956 raid on a lottery headquarters in his county.

Charles Harold Echols of Forsyth County is charged with using his home as the headquarters. Officers from the sheriff's office and a state patrol captain said they raided Echols' home near Cumming in September, 1956. Four of the other defendants were arrested and booked under phony names, the government charges.

UNDER TREATMENT

John Elmer Ingram, a first cousin of Harold Ingram, is charged with having participated in the racket with his cousin and several of the other defendants. The government consented to a separate trial for him when it was reported he was suffering from an active case of tuberculosis. Ingram, already under conviction on whiskey and lottery charges is undergoing treatment at a federal prison hospital in Springfield, Mo.

Sanchez (Muleface) McDowell, the fourth defendant yet to be tried, has not been apprehended since federal grand jury returned its indictment against him and the others several months ago.

Defense attorneys won a separate trial for Tallent. The ex-sheriff protested that to try him with the other persons named as lottery operators would be "embarrassing" and "highly judicial."

SEPARATE TRIAL

Echols was ordered tried separately after attorneys for certain of the other defendants said Echols allegedly had given a statement to federal agents which would be prejudicial to the other defendants.

Assistant U.S. District Attorney E. Ralph Ivey who prosecuted the case said he hopes to bring the four remaining defendants to trial in the January term of U.S. District Court.

Ivey said he expects to try all four at the same time.

They Were Butterflies You Thought You Saw

By ALEX JOINER

Bright orange butterflies by the hundreds breezed through downtown Atlanta Friday.

An upset office worker reported the strange sight to The Constitution about 4:30 p.m.

And about the same time a pair of the beasts wafted by outside the fifth floor of the newsroom, brilliant against the overcast sky. (Caller, obviously, was not just getting an early start on the weekend.)

There were other calls from other office workers. One said there were "millions of them."

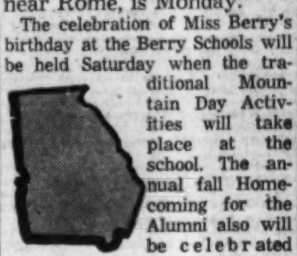

Lepidopteran guidance was indicated. A call to the biology department (the biologists were all in conference and couldn't be disturbed) unearthed a graduate student who knows about such things who reported:

The visitors were Monarch butterflies (a great relief to callers and reporters alike.)

A social sort of butterfly, they spend the winter in the South and—like geese and certain Northerners who have made good—were en route to warmer climes. They travel in "flocks" and they feed on milkweed.

And (talk about modern parenthood) only the adult butterflies make the trip.

The larvae (or little ones) were left North for the winter and (sneaky people) they'll leave the new litter in Miami Beach or Saturday.

The day begins with Joint Chapel Assembly in the Mount Berry Chapel at 11:30 a.m. where some 900 students will gather with hundreds of Alumni, staff and friends.

At the chapel service, Berry alumni will speak on the influence of Berry Ideals in various phases of Community Service.

Kankakee Anderson, graduate of the Class of 1925, represents the field of education. Anderson has since his graduation from Berry been active in Public School Education.

John Warr will speak on Berry's influence in the Church and Religious work. Warr was graduated from Berry in the college class of 1937. He is now superintendent of the Baptist Orphanage at Hapeville.

Frank Wardlow, who will speak on Berry's influence in the business world, is a graduate of the 1935 college class.

Col. Harold T. Babb, Berry 1932-1937, speaks as a military man.

Henry Gheseling will speak on government.

Constitution State News Service

AUGUSTA, Oct. 4—Duane W. Kline, 33, of Decatur received the "Who's Crippled?" citation—coveted award of the National Society for Crippled Children and Adults—at annual meeting of the Georgia society here Friday.

Kline, a polio victim, overcame paralysis to follow a journalistic career as editor of the monthly house organ of the Sixth District Federal Reserve Bank. The citation salutes the Georgian for "valiant spirit and determination in building a normal, successful life."

Kline, a graduate of the University of Michigan, honeymooned with his bride at Warm Springs. The Decatur couple are parents of a year-old daughter.

Mayor Proclaims Prevent-Fires Week

Mayor Hartsfield has by proclamation designated the week beginning Sunday as Fire Prevention Week.

He called upon all departments and agencies of the city government to participate in a campaign for improved fire safety.

"The fire department and the schools of our city can provide effective leadership in the activities of Fire Prevention Week," Hartsfield said, "and I urge them to work with the Chamber of Commerce and other organizations for a successful program."

Car Kills Boy Sailing Boat at Curb

A 10-year-old boy was killed Friday when struck by a car near his home on Fayetteville road, S.E., police said.

The death of Bobby Joe Garrison of 1068 Fayetteville Rd., was the 59th traffic fatality for the year in Atlanta, records showed. Forty-five were killed in a similar period of last year.

Patrolman F. L. Russell said the driver, Larry Douglas Hinton, 20, of Dacula, was charged with disorderly conduct-manslaughter, violating pedestrian rights and speeding 40 in a 35-mile zone.

Russell said he was told Hinton was attempting to pass another car when the youth ran or fell from the curbing into the path of his car.

The victim and a brother, James Floyd Garrison, 12, were sailing toy boats in a rain puddle near the roadside, the patrolman said.

Military Rule Is Replacing Constitution, Lawson Says

Constitution State News Service

CRAWFORDVILLE, Oct. 4—Former Highway Board Chairman Roger Lawson stepped up his attack on President Eisenhower in a speech in Alexander Stephens Memorial Park near here Friday.

"We are at the crossroads of government by the people and the iron fist of dictatorship," he declared.

"Constitutional government in America has been displaced by illegality and military rule," he declared.

The American people, he asserted, "have been duped, deceived and misled by a political court, a political President, a political attorney general and a political district judge in Little Rock."

Lawson, a candidate for governor, said "this philosophy that might makes right could well mean the end of free government in America."

Lawson spoke at a ceremony marking the completion of White Plains road, the first Rural Roads Authority project in Tallapoosa County.

Board Refuses Paroles for 3 In Pecan Thefts

Three Dougherty County Negroes serving time on pecan theft charges were denied parole Friday by the State Board of Pardons and Paroles.

The board previously paroled a 72-year-old white man, S. K. Simon, serving time for conviction of accepting the stolen goods in the case.

Board chairman Hugh Carney said Friday, however, that there were "no grounds for making exceptions" in the case of the Negroes. Simon was paroled because of poor health, Carney said.

The three Negroes were listed as W.M. Marshall, Reuben Jackson Jr. and Will Hall. They are each serving three to five-year sentences.

newly-elected president of Georgia's "Easter Seal Society," presented the award. Other new officers, named at the initial session of a two-day meeting of the state organization here, are: Norman E. Elsas, Atlanta, vice president; Claude Christopher, Griffin, vice president; Mrs. John C. Huie, Albany, secretary, and George Haas, Atlanta, treasurer.

The society will adjourn its annual meeting Saturday afternoon.

School Day, 4-H Tests Feature Fair

Friday was State 4-H Club Day and School Day at the Southeastern Fair, with 4-H'ers from all Georgia competing for championships under soggy gray skies.

Rains again cancelled appearances of the George Holmes Wild West Rodeo and Rin Tin Tin shows. Fair officials expressed hope the shows will be presented on schedule Saturday.

School buses from widely-scattered Georgia areas unloaded raincoat-clad boys and girls early Friday. Youngsters spent a busy day in mud-slippery cattle rings and other judging areas.

Linda Humphrey of Bibb County was named state cherry pie bake-off champion. She will represent Georgia in a national competition later this year.

Slenczynska A Skillful and Fiery Pianist

Ruth Slenczynska, whose appearance here last year was limited to some Saint-Saens bravura with the Boston Pops, proved Friday night she can hold the stage by herself.

The petite pianist offered a distinguished opening for the Music Club and Atlanta music seasons.

Her first selection, Bach's "Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue in D Minor," was well chosen to demonstrate her technical mastery. Miss Slenczynska thrilled the audience with rippling keyboard work and titanic dynamic efforts, capped by the stunning and demanding fugue.

But if Bach revealed her skill, Beethoven revealed her soul.

Her technique in Beethoven's "Pathetique" Sonata became so transparent that one had the impression of looking through a window into the composer's deepest feelings. She moved faultlessly from the anguish of the allegro to the self-realization of the adagio cantabile and the triumph of the rondo.

Five Rachmaninoff preludes, while clearly from one pen, nonetheless provided a variety of moods themselves, from the dreamy "B Flat" to the familiar, rousing "G Minor."

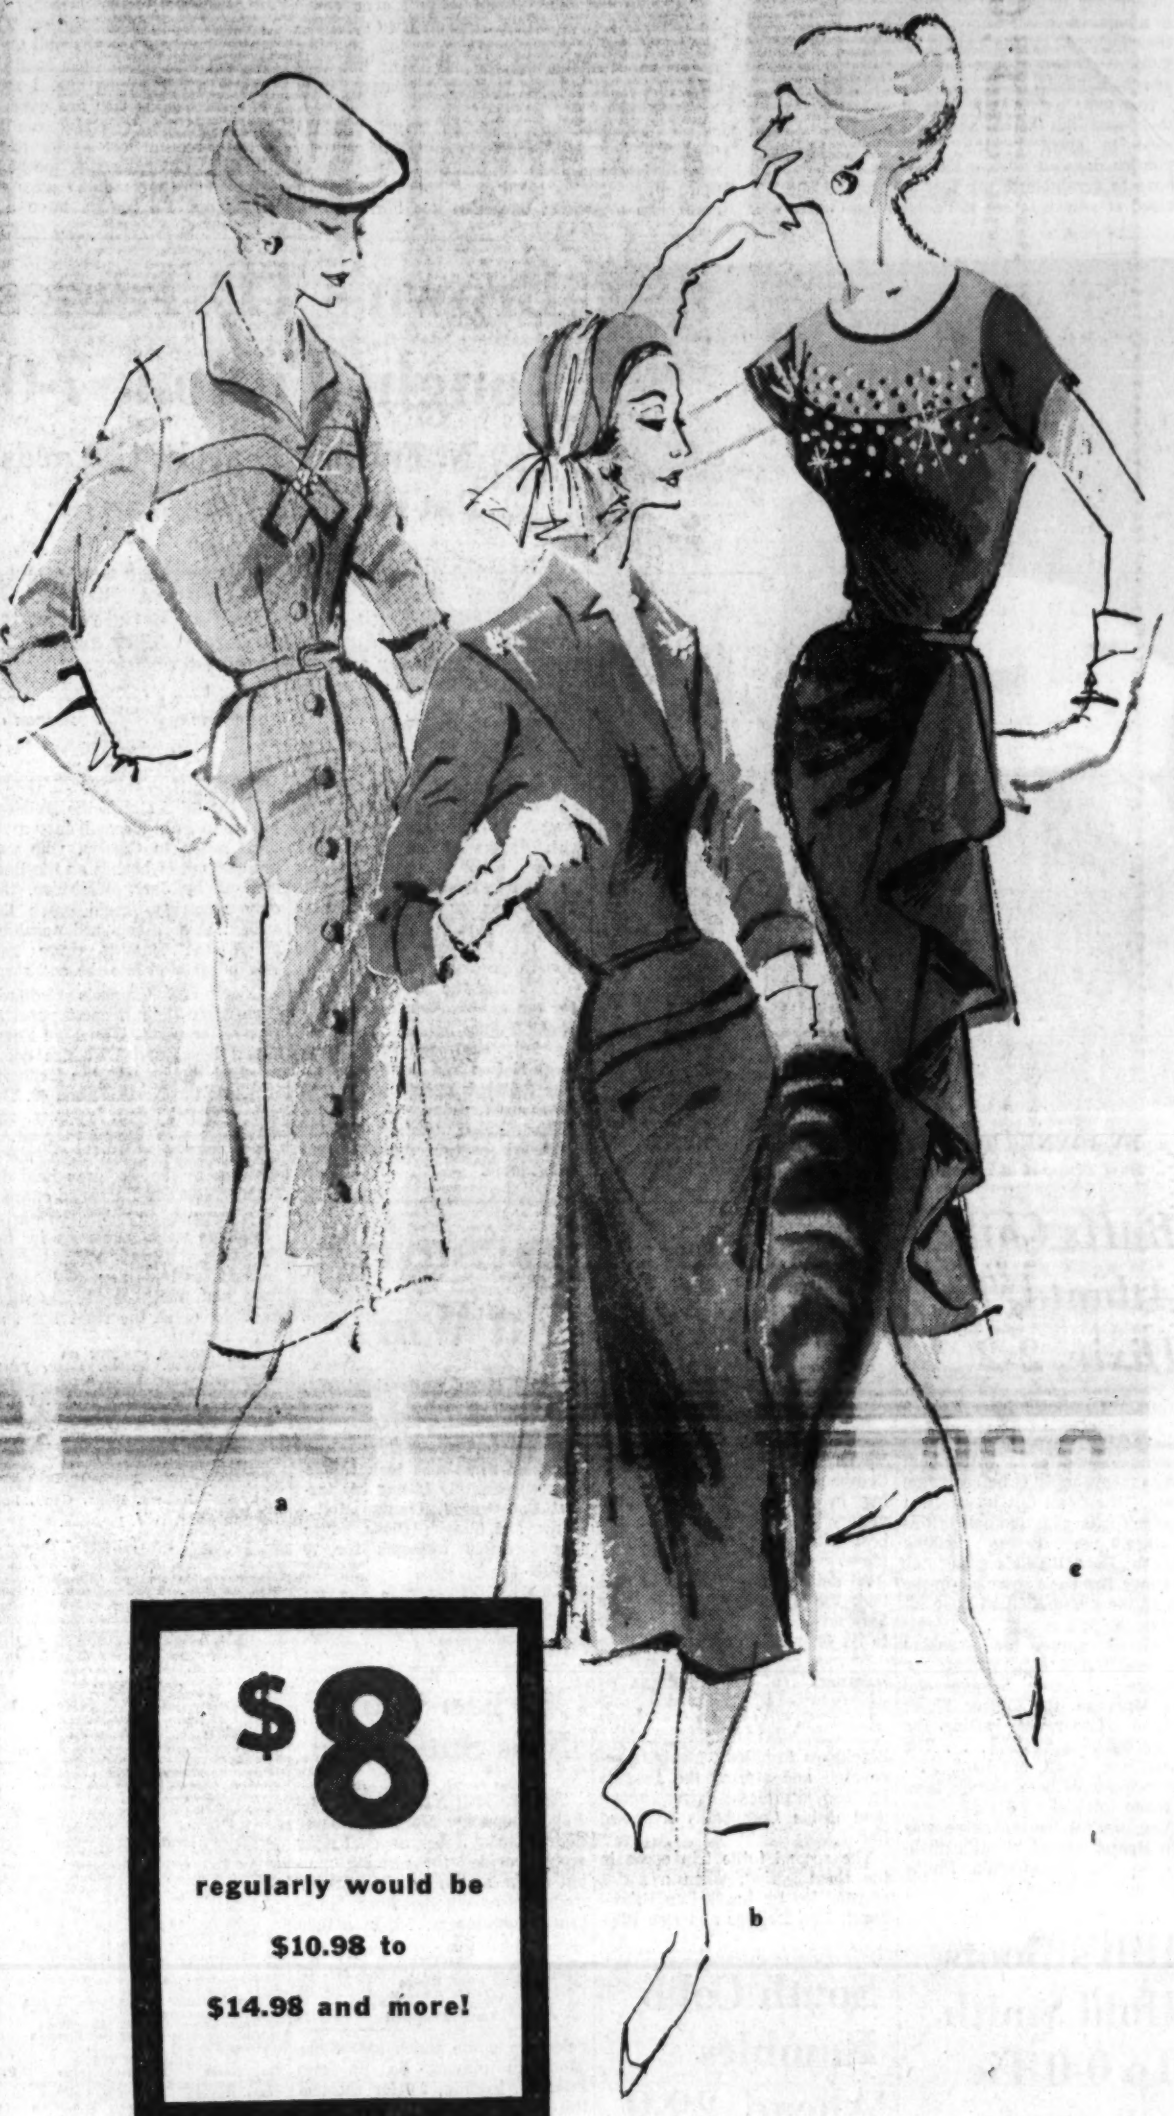

The rest of her program included a lyrical reading of Mendelssohn's "Lost Happiness" and a lively one of his "Spinning Song," of Rachmaninoff's "Oriental Sketch," and a blazing virtuoso display in Liszt's "Variations on a Theme of Paganini."

She encoored with Liszt and a Chopin etude dedicate to her young niece.—B.G.

Leaders Hear Report On Tallulah Budget

By BETTY CARROLLTON

Georgia clubwomen this week heard a "report of yesteryear" that is equally applicable today.

At a meeting of the executive board of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. J. W. Gholston, Comer, finance committee chairman, recalled excerpts from her reports of eight and 10 years ago that are "just as applicable to our school business today."

Referring to federation-owned Tallulah Falls School, Mrs. Gholston declared: "It is our investment, its success depends on our intelligent knowledge and interest in the school's business affairs."

"VITAL, CHALLENGING" She pointed out that the obligation for Tallulah "has never been as vital and challenging as it is today."

"It offers us the privilege of making the present secure so that the school may be secure in the future," she observed.

Reporting on the 1957-58 budget, Mrs. Gholston announced an anticipated income of $127,975, and budgeted expenditures totaling the same amount.

Of the anticipated income, some $42,000 includes contributions from clubs and individuals, and $4,500 from the Young Matrons Circle. Income will also be derived from public funds, endowments, fees, lunchroom, athletics, store sales and foundations.

EXPANSION PROGRAM

While the building and expansion program at the school is still in progress, the new fieldhouse and numerous campus improvements have been completed.

"Tallulah is our charge to keep," concluded the club leader. "We cannot fail our responsibility to those others who struggled before us, who met and overcame great difficulties. We cannot fail our many generous friends who have believed in our work and who have helped to share our burden."

"These, too, are words from my report of yesteryear."

District conservation chairmen will do the preliminary judging, sending the best five jingles to Mrs. Martin, 300 Blackland Rd., N.E., Atlanta, by April 1, 1958. The conservation chairman emphasized that all entries should reach the district conservation chairmen by March 1.

FOUR LINES LONG

"Jingles should be four lines in length," she explained. "Something Smoky Bear might say to call attention to the importance of protecting our forests and wildlife."

A NEW-FANGLED DESSERT, THE CROWNING GLORY FOR ANY MEAL
It's a Fruit-Filled Bavarian Cream With a Subtle and Exotic Flavor

Fruitcake's a Mystery, Brings Early Christmas

By VIRGINIA DYSARD

Constitution Food Editor

CHICAGO, Oct. 4—Food with a foreign flavor was in the spotlight Friday as food editors went around the world in two hours at the Alcoa International breakfast.

Though the room was decorated with flags and foreign dolls, the "recipe swap" was the outstanding event as food editors said farewell on the last day of the convention and agreed to swap favorite recipes.

FROZEN PASTRIES

Introduced at the gathering by Pepperidge Farms was a new line of frozen pastries which, unfortunately will not come to Atlanta for another six months.

These frozen apple turnovers, patty shells, Napoleon puffs, Viennese apfelstrudel and others need only about 20 minutes' baking time to be big, fat, puffy and delicious.

Mother Nature often gets the blame for any number of things. Friday, however, it was said that she only needs a boost now and then. The talking was being done by Sugar Information, Inc.

EARLY CHRISTMAS

Tests made at the University of California indicated that sugar not only adds sweetness but brings out the natural flavor of food. So the sugar people suggest a sugar shaker to season foods along with salt and pepper.

With the Chicago hospitality, Christmas comes every day of the week, but Betty Crocker topped it off with a real Christmas dinner. The menu might be described as fabulous, fantastic or perhaps kingly. To mention the main items: half an avocado with lime sherbert, Tom Thumb Turkey, grapefruit and pomegranate on Bibb lettuce, frozen eggnog with rum sauce, Betty Crocker mystery fruit cake and creme de menthe.

Unbelievable to the guests, the fruit cake served was a mix with a real home-made flavor. It should take something like an hour to whip up.

MYSTERY FRUIT CAKE

1 pkg. Betty Crocker honey spice, yellow, white or devil's food cake mix
4 cups candied mixed fruit (two 1-lb. jars)
1/2 cup each whole red and green candied cherries (1/2 lb.)
1 1/2 cup seedless raisins (1/2 lb.)
1 cup dates, cut up 4 1/2-oz. pkg.
4 1/2 cups pecan halves (1 lb.)
1 pkg. Betty Crocker fluffy white frosting mix

Make cake as directed on package. Cool. Crumble cooled cake into large bowl and add rest of ingredients.

Make fluffy white frosting mix according to package directions and add to fruit, nuts, and cake mixture. Stir with spoon or toss together with hands until mixture is damp and blended together.

Pack tightly into two foil-lined pans. Pat down with buttered hands until smooth. Cover cake with foil and chill in refrigerator at least 24 hours. Cake improves if stored longer. Cake should be kept refrigerated. Slice with sharp knife and serve cold. Makes 6 1/2 pounds fruitcake.

For a dessert that can be the crowning glory for any meal, here's a fruit-filled Bavarian cream that can be made hours before the guests arrive.

CROWNING GLORY DESSERT

1 (20-oz.) can crushed pineapple
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
2 tps. aromatic bitters
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
1 pkg. whole frozen strawberries

Drain pineapple well. Add enough water to juice to make 1 cup of liquid. In top of double boiler, mix gelatin and liquid and heat over boiling water until gelatin is dissolved.

Remove from heat. Add bitters and drained crushed pineapple; blend well. Chill in refrigerator until mixture begins to congeal. Fold in whipped cream and turn into a wet, five-cup ring mold. Chill until firm. At serving time, unmold and fill hollow with strawberries.

Annie Lou Hardy Piedmont Auxiliary Plans Elaborate Ball

Creating no end of excitement, even this far in advance, are reports of elaborate plans for the grand ball at which members of the Women's Auxiliary of Piedmont Hospital will entertain on Jan. 23. Complete with red carpet treatment, it bids fair to rival the great balls of such cities as New York, San Francisco, New Orleans, St. Louis and Charleston.

The affair will be called the Piedmont Ball and will be held, appropriately, at the Piedmont Driving Club. The hospital will, of course, benefit from the gala event which will be elegantly formal, with one of the best known bands in the country coming to play for dancing, and a scrumptious dinner in the French manner served with the proper wines, etc., all for the price of $35 per couple. Scripto, Inc., has generously consented to act as guarantor, according to announcement by Mrs. Strother Fleming Jr., the auxiliary president.

Furthermore, the ball is slated to be held annually, and will eventually become tradition in Atlanta's social history.

DR. AND MRS. JAMES FANCHER leave Tuesday to drive to Miami for the Men's Convention of the Southern Presbyterian Church. They will be guests at the Biscayne Terrace. Immediately after the meeting, while her husband swims, fishes and relaxes in the sun, Mrs. Fancher will go into session with the Presbyterian Church's Board of Christian Education, of which she is a member.

ADDITIONAL PARTIES planned for bride-elect Edith Willingham are the luncheon to be given Tuesday by Mrs. Woodrow Tucker at the Cherokee Club, and the buffet supper at which Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Mixon and the W. W. Andersons will be hosts at the Mixon home on Oct. 14.

Yesterday Mrs. W. Kelly Mosley entertained at luncheon for Miss Willingham, who will become the bride of S/Sgt. Orel Bartlett Chaffee of Harlingen, Tex., on Oct. 19.

The bridal couple, who have just arrived from Harlingen where Miss Willingham has been living, were feted there on Saturday when Mr. and Mrs. Donald W. Jackson and Mr. and Mrs. Albert White entertained at cocktails. The party was held in the softly-lighted patio at the Jackson home which was decorated in arrangements of fruits and flowers in the autumn shades. Mrs. Jackson is the former Emily Alexander of Atlanta.

MR. AND MRS. PAUL P. REESE are back at their Palisades road home after a visit to Mrs. I. W. Myers in Tifton and at her beach home at St. Simons.

THE LIBRARY COMMITTEE of the Atlanta Art Assn., headed by Mrs. Eugene R. Martini, will entertain at a morning coffee in the Haverly Library following the monthly meeting of the Women's Committee of the association on Tuesday, Oct. 8. Miss May Haverly will pour.

Members of the Women's Committee will meet at 10:30 in the members' room.

THREE BAYLOR STUDENTS are home for the weekend, each with a classmate as his guest. Phillips Cuttino brought Hugh Redhead of Woodville, Miss., as his guest, Rufus Guthrie brought Jimmy Wright of Sanford, Fla., and Pat Rolleston has David Carlisle of Jackson, Tenn., as his guest.

ELEVEN ATLANTA GIRLS are among the 67 members of the Wesleyan Glee Club chosen this week by director Leon Jacques Villard. They are Joyce Byrd, Jean Cain, Donna Ruth Doster, Charlotte Jean Edwards, Gayle Langston, Charlene Mallory, Norma Mullings, Linda Lee Oliver, Eugenia Rice, Helen Stowers and Louise Williams.

First appearance for the club this year will be at the Kiwanis state convention in Augusta tomorrow evening.

ATLANTANS ATTENDING the annual meeting of the National Assn. of Bank Women to be held in Boston Oct. 7-10 will include Mrs. Helen P. Thompson, Mrs. Lucile O. Adams, Miss Nevada Pickett, Miss Evelyn Worley and Mrs. Anne D. Nabers. Miss Madge Duncan of Woodstock will join the Atlantans for the trip.

Students Spark Fair Activities

Regardless of the weather man's predictions, it's a FAIR week-end for Georgia students.

Youths throughout the state have been in a bustle of activity for weeks preparing exhibits and entries for competition in various categories at the Southeastern Fair. Those efforts have begun to pay off as students get in the premium spotlight and outstanding teenagers are singled out for recognition for accomplishments and rewards to spark their continued interest in chosen fields.

Members of Georgia's 4-H clubs got youth activities under way at the fair Friday participating in a series of special events from livestock judging to baking cherry pies.

Saturday's fair spotlight will be focused on Future Farmers of America and Future Homemakers of America, but students will be in the limelight throughout the 10 days of "Georgia's greatest show."

The FFA-FHA program will begin at 10 a.m. with the Atlanta Area FFA purchased swine show at the livestock building, followed by the safe tractor operation and maintenance contest. The FFA livestock judging contest will be held at 1 p.m.

Stewart Bloodworth, Perry, state FFA leader, will be awarded the president's trophy.

A highlight of the afternoon schedule of events will be the FFA tractor driving contest. The winner will receive a $50 cash award along with the opportunity to compete on a national level at the Oklahoma state fair in Tulsa. Students competing Saturday are the first and second-place winners in the state's four geographical districts. They include Ted Edwards, Lyerly; Gary Sparks, Forsyth; Oliver Green Jr., Jones County High School; Gray; Roy Bailey, Dawson County High School, Dawsonville; Charles Powe, Cairo; Emory Tyner, Perry; Alton Mitchell, Claxton, and Roger Bell, Savannah.

There'll be something for the girls, too.

Members of the Southwest DeKalb and Henry County FHA chapters will stage a fashion and talent show as one in a series of events spotlighting work of Future Homemakers. This will be part of the special program to be held in the auditorium at 2 p.m., followed by the FFA-FHA awards presentation program. Joyce Cryder of Elberton, state FHA president, will receive the president's trophy and Priscilla Jones, Blakely, outstanding FHA'er on a national scale, will be presented a scholarship, given annually by the Southeastern Fair to young women interested in becoming teachers.

FFA-FHA chapter representatives will be honor guests at a gala party at the Fair Center at 3 p.m.

It's a family affair for the Wallace Eidsons of Dunwoody, whose entries spark more than one exhibit at the fair. The Eidson youngsters—Wally, 18, a physics major at Georgia Tech; Gene, 17, equally adept with the paint brush and drum sticks; Sandra 15, a master 4-H'er who's talented in the kitchen and at the sewing machine; Bobby, 12, who's main interest is goats and livestock; and Elton, 6, a 4-H mascot and artist in her own right—all have won awards for their creative skills. (Although Bobby and Elton have no entries in this year's competition, they've both won prizes at other fairs.) Mrs. Eidson, too, is no stranger to the winner's circle. But this year her pickles and canning entries took second-place ribbons. Daughter Sandra's entries won top prize. Wally's cure for a sweet tooth netted him a ribbon for his candy, while Gene, who admits his pet pastime is playing the drums, won honors in china painting.

One of the most exciting phases of fair activities is the "Youth Speaks Through Art" program. Sponsored by the school systems of Atlanta, DeKalb and Fulton County, the program features demonstrations of various teen-age hobbies in art. Exhibits have a professional look, attesting to the talent of the students.

Distributive Education comes in for a share of attention, too. The exhibit spotlighting this valuable phase of education illustrates how the program offers students regular classroom studies as well as practical experience for careers in the on-the-job training.

High school bands are daily providing musical entertainment, with two bands performing each day.

A Dog's Life Lot of Fun For TV Cast

By BETTY CARROLLTON

Rin Tin Tin's TV troupe is probably the happiest in Hollywood.

A close companionship exists between cast members of the film series that revolves around the stout-hearted canine and his trooper friends of "Fort Apache." The stars of the show—Rinty, Lee Aaker (Cpl. Rusty), and handsome James Brown (Lt. Rip Masters)—have a mutual respect for each other and don't shy from hard work. But they find time for fun, too. The set of the "Adventures of Rin Tin Tin" is always a happy, if hectic, scene.

HINT OF JEALOUSY

In Atlanta for personal appearances at the Southeastern Fair, Lee took time out from his classroom studies with teacher Florence Burrill to romp with Rinty and Jim for the benefit of newly made Atlanta friends. (There was just a hint of professional jealousy between Lee and Frank Barnes, Rinty's trainer, as the canine star was called upon to perform some of his famous feats.)

Jim revealed that all the troupe's adventures are not captured by the TV cameras. Lee has a keen sense of humor and often plays practical jokes on his co-workers.

"We don't dare go out to eat with Lee without keeping a close eye on him," Jim said with a grin. "Otherwise we'd find salt in our coffee, sugar in our water, and water in our pockets."

"NEVER PLAY TRICKS"

"Of course, you never play any tricks on me!" Lee jeered. "You just dunk me in water barrels—and never let me have any fun."

"No, you never get to do anything," Lee's manager said sadly. "On the last personal appearance tour you just drove in the Indianapolis Speedway—the first boy to ever actually drive on it—flew in a helicopter, rode every ride on the midway at least 30 times, and spent all day on a yacht."

"I was only on the yacht half a day," Lee reminded him. But the entire cast agrees that is a man of many talents. The tall, handsome actor is the former Texas state tennis champion, was a vocalist with Garwood Van's Orchestra, plays every one of the wind instruments in the orchestra, and is a successful rancher.

Do Teen-Agers Know Parents?

Do today's teen-agers understand their parents? Do they try? What are their responsibilities toward establishing a better relationship with parents?

His movie triumphs include such films as "Young and Willing," "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay," "Going My Way," "Sands of Iwo Jima," "Wild Blue Yonder," "Pride of St. Louis," "Anna Lucasta," "Charge at Feather River," and the Judy Garland starrer, "A Star Is Born."

HEAVY SCHEDULE

His present heavy schedule doesn't allow Jim time to devote to much other than the Rin Tin Tin series, but he does still do quite a lot of singing on personal appearances. Most of his spare time he spends grooming his three daughters for future competition on the tennis courts.

Admittedly there are some problems that come up during the filming of the TV series.

But as far as Lee is concerned, there is only one of any consequence:

Be Sophisticated Souper

By DON GOODWIN

Someday an enterprising scholar is going to sit down and write a paper on soup. It should be a stem-winder.

The paper will view soup, not as food, but as a test of sophistication. Merely by observing someone eat this modest dish our scholar will determine if he's polished, semipolished or lacking utterly in the social graces.

He will note, for example, that the polished man is set off from his semipolished brethren by the smallest of flourishes, little niceties of manner that escape any but the most watchful eye.

The polished man, he'll find, always dips his spoon away from the table edge. He then drinks from the side of the spoon, tilting the soup into his mouth rather than engulfing it.

TILTS BOWL

If he tilts the bowl to get the last of the soup (not only acceptable but commendable, in these inflationary days), he tilts the bowl away from him.

Assuming his EQ (etiquette quotient) is really at a genius level, he does these things without a trace of la-di-da. His manners are so cool and relaxed nobody thinks of them as manners.

But the impression is unanimous: Here's a gentleman!

The semipolished man is not likely to have heard of these niceties, much less practice them. But he's far from a dolt.

He knows, for example, that you should never leave your spoon sticking out of a soup bowl. It belongs on the plate beneath the bowl.

Where he gets confused is when the soup comes in a soup plate. Naturally there's no plate under it. Where does the spoon go?

If he puts the dripping thing on the tablecloth, he of course flunks the test. It belongs in the soup plate.

His confusion is even greater when he confronts a soup cup with handles. The rule is: where there are handles, use them. If there's garnish on the top, remove it with the spoon; scoop up any noodles or vegetables with the spoon. But heave-ho and down the hatch with the rest.

NO PROBLEM

OUR scholar will have no problem spotting men with low EQs. He just listens. When he hears a horrible sucking noise, he looks for the source.

There he finds, hunched over his plate, a chowhound so avid to finish his soup he doesn't wait for the spoon to reach his mouth. He sets up a vacuum and the soup completes the trip by air.

This impatience—the invariable mark of a low EQ—is also shown when a man blows on his soup rather than waits for it to cool.

Not so boorish but not very polished either is the practice of crumbling crackers in soup—a passion also shared by the semipolished. Crackers should go in whole or not at all.

Q & A ON P'S & Q'S

(Q): "My husband has the irritating habit of never drinking his coffee but sipping entire cups with a spoon. This is not manly, is it?" Mrs. S. J. Portland.

(A): Nor womanly. Spoons are for tasting and stirring. Coffee should be drunk, not ladled.

Impounders Boost Wheat

CHICAGO, Oct. 4 (AP)—Wheat futures scored biggest gains of the week today, advancing up to 2 1/2 cents a bushel on trade reports of heavy impoundings of the bread grain under government loan.

Mixed in early dealing, wheat moved higher midway through the session on buying spurred by a private estimate which fixed the amount of 1957 wheat at 2 1/2 cents a bushel on trade reports of heavy impoundings of the bread grain under government loan.

That figure would indicate that impoundings increased around 59 million bushels since Aug. 15 when the Department of Agriculture reported about 36 million bushels under loan.

Dedication of Dam
To Draw 2 Senators

By HERMAN HANCOCK

One of Georgia's most festive and important celebrations—the formal dedication of the $42,000,000 Buford dam—is scheduled for Wednesday.

Officials from Georgia, Florida and Alabama are slated to participate in ceremonies during which Sen. Russell of Georgia will be the principal speaker. Mayor Hartsfield will christen the dam by breaking a bottle of mixed water from the Chattahoochee, the Flint and the Apalachicola rivers.

The observance will begin with a breakfast given by the Atlanta Association of Insurance Agents, headed by Curtis H. Bryant, at the Dinkler Plaza Hotel at 8:30 a.m. Wednesday, and will end late in the afternoon when the party of dignitaries come back to Atlanta in buses which will take them to the site of the festivities.

Mayor Hartsfield, a pioneer Buford dam advocate, will present the distinguished guests.

200 FOR BREAKFAST

In addition to Russell, Sen. Herman Talmadge and Reps. James C. Davis, John J. Flynt and Phil Landrum of Georgia, Gov. Griffin, Gov. James E. Folsom and Rep. George Andrews of Alabama and Rep. Robert Sikes of Florida are expected.

Others attending will be officials of the Army Engineering Corps, civic, business and industrial leaders.

Approximately 200 have been invited to the breakfast.

F. M. (Buster) Bird, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, will present citations to Russell, Davis and Hartsfield as pioneers in the construction of Georgia's greatest dam.

For the mayor, it will mean the third Chamber of Commerce award during his long political career. He won his first in 1928 for his successful efforts to establish the Atlanta airport. Again in 1941, he was tapped for handling the "Gone With the Wind" world premiere.

MULTI-PURPOSE PROJECT

The group will move out of Atlanta after the breakfast celebration. On arrival at Buford, the Upper Chattahoochee Development Association, headed by Weldon Gardner, will become host.

The association has worked indefatigably for the improvement over the years.

There will be a chicken lunch, the formal dedication exercises and then the return to Atlanta.

The dam is a multi-purpose project. It is designed to control floods, to firm up the water supply for areas southward, to provide recreation and produce power.

Street To Be Closed

Murphy Avenue between Arden and Langston avenues will be closed Monday for rebuilding of the Central of Georgia spur track into the National Biscuit Co. plant.

Col. Rex LeFevre, of the construction department, said the repairs will require the remainder of the week, but is a much needed improvement.

Duplexes Studied

The joint Atlanta-Fulton County Board of Adjustment Friday approved three petitions and held a fourth for further study.

Alfred Pittman, chairman, said the board wants to consider further a proposal to erect two duplexes on lots on South Avenue at Connelly street.

Fulton Asks State to Speed Aid for New Health Center

By RICHARD ASHWORTH

The Georgia State Health Department has been asked to give "immediate consideration" to Fulton County's application for state and federal funds to aid in building a new county central health center.

The request was made in a letter to Dr. Clifford Rutland, director of local health services, by County Commissioner Vice Chairman Carlyle Fraser.

Fraser said in the letter that the county plans to undertake the complete construction of a new health building near the new Grady Hospital building. Upon scheduled completion of the building early in 1959, all county health facilities will be moved there, Fraser added.

Noting that the present health center—which he termed inadequate—was built with the aid of state and federal funds, Fraser emphasized that the City of Atlanta is willing to reimburse state and federal agencies for funds used in the present building's construction when health facilities move out of it.

The county, Fraser said, has limited funds to build the new health center. The $1,250,000 set up in bond funds for the building will be "wholly inadequate" for the new building without state and federal aid, the commissioner declared.

Army May Not Take Elvis Till Late '58

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 4

(AP)—It'll probably be civilian—not Pvt.—Elvis Presley for another year.

The rock 'n' roll singer was examined for the draft last January and classified 1-A. Officials of his draft board said then he wouldn't be inducted for six or eight months.

But today, board chairman Milton Bowers said that because of reduced draft quotas it now "looks like late next year" before Presley will be called.
